Cain Makes a New Short Break

A handcuffed Danny Cain broke free from two sheriffs today and spent nearly half an hour free in Victoria's Inner Harbor area before he was recaptured hiding under a bed in a waterfront hotel.

Cain, 19, was being put onto an Air West Airlines seaplane flight to be taken to the B.C. Penitentiary in New Westminster when he made his break at about 11:30 a.m.

The fugitive fled west along Belleville.

As policemen ran around the hotel, searching each floor, including the basement, she noticed that a security lock on one of the doors on the first floor was pushed out.

She alerted a policeman.

He offered no resistance.

Witness said Cain ran through the front door of the hotel and disappeared until the security lock was noticed.

Tuesday Cain was forced out of a Summit Avenue hideout by a police tear gas attack after he spent three days on the loose after escaping from Wilkinson Road Jail.

After today's break he was returned to city jail for possible new charges in provincial court.

Space Link A Success

HOUSTON (AP) — The United States Apollo and Soviet Soyuz spaceships linked up in orbit today, and three hours later the commanders of the two ships shook hands and exchanged bear hugs in a connecting tunnel between the two craft.

"I'm very happy to see you," U.S. commander Thomas Stafford said as he grasped the hand of Alexei Leonov after a hatch was opened between the tunnel and the Soyuz craft.

Leonov then reached over and embraced Stafford with the traditional Russian bear-hug greeting.

The long-awaited meeting of the two commanders came after the spacemen had received a brief scare when they detected a burning odor in the tunnel shortly after the linkup.

The odor was traced to an experiment furnace and quickly dissipated, permitting the mission to continue.

Following the greeting between the two commanders, Leonov shook hands with U.S. astronaut Donald Slayton. The second Soviet spaceman, Valeri Kubasov, joined in the welcoming ceremony, and then the two astronauts moved through the hatch into the Soyuz.

The third astronaut, Vance Brand, remained on station in the Apollo.

The astronauts apparently never did put the oxygen masks on, but Stafford said the masks were at their sides, ready for use if necessary.

The Americans said the smell resembled burning glue or acetone.

"I'm just standing by here to see if I feel any different, but I still feel pretty good," Slayton told concerned ground controllers fearing that there was a possibility that gases might overcome the pilots. "I still feel pretty good. I'm not used to sniffing glue."

A few minutes later, Slayton reported he had entered the docking module and everything was still okay: "No health problems."

The docking itself went very smoothly and Stafford exclaimed, "we have succeeded."

"We are looking forward to shaking hands with you aboard Soyuz," Leonov said.

Even MPs Can't Be Trusted

OTTAWA (CP) — Counterfeit money in the Parliamentary Restaurant?

Not yet, but restaurant manager Bill Pentecost is trying to prevent funny money from being passed there.

Pentecost has issued a memo to staff instructing that they are not to accept $50 or $100 bills. Any MPs, senators, senior officials and reporters who have access to the restaurant and insist on using the big bills will have to sign them, says the memo.

The issue was raised in the Commons when Bill Clarke (PC — Vancouver - Quadra) asked Finance Minister John Turner to consider new bills to replace the present $50 and $100 bills that counterfeiters apparently find easy to copy.

Many stores now refuse to accept the bills because of the high incidence of forgeries.

Turner said he will look into the possibility.

INDIANS GIVEN ULTIMATUM

Blockade Must Go

The attorney-general's department today issued ultimatums to two native Indian bands that their road blockades must be dismantled or there will be no negotiation of Indian demands.

In the case of a roadblock in the Mount Currie area near Pemberton, a letter to the Indian band states that "steps would be taken to have it removed" if the roadblock is not taken down forthwith.

Deputy attorney-general David Vickers today released the letter, sent to Mount Currie Indian Band Chief Al Stager. Vickers declined to elaborate what nature the "steps" would be taken.

Indications are that two representatives from the lands department and highways department are on their way to the site to discuss the matter.

Vickers said he hopes native Indians there will agree to remove the blockade — blocking the road to a pulp mill and the wharf — on the undertaking that the provincial government will negotiate with them.

RCMP were given orders Tuesday to remove the roadblock but the order was rescinded after Vickers learned that the Indians had repositioned the barricade to a site where ownership of the land is in dispute.

Vickers said the government is investigating to see whether the 1.91 acre site is on public land or Indian land as the Indians claim.

Meanwhile, the letter issued to the Mount Currie chief July 15 says that: "The attorney-general has a paramount law enforcement responsibility to protect people and property. The situation at Mount Currie requires immediate action."

It also says the attorney-general will immediately discuss with the department of highways the situation relating to the road at Mount Currie.

Vickers said the letter was sent to confirm a conversation he had Saturday with the chief's wife Verna Stager.

Mary Williams, a spokesman for the Mount Currie band, said today she doubts whether the blockade will be removed.

"We're just getting so damned fed up . . . ," she said. "Nobody really cares."

Williams said some of the people manning the roadblock have guns, but they've been told not to use them.

The blockade of the Mount Currie-Lillooet Road began in late June as a protest over seizure by federal officials of food fishing nets.

She said non-Indians in the area are very hostile about the blockade.

In Gold River RCMP continue to keep an uneasy peace while the blockade between the town and the Muchalat Inlet enters its fourth day.

Highways Minister Graham Lea said his deputy is travelling to Gold River to negotiate with the Indians but he will not start discussions until the blockade is removed.

The price of the parcel of land where the blockade is currently sited will be discussed by Howard Sturrock, said Lea.

He will be accompanied by George Wilson of the lands branch who will attempt to negotiate leases and access to the foreshore.

The Pub Staff Was Cut Off

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Five employees of the Empress Hotel's Beaver pub who say they were fired for refusing to serve a customer they had earlier barred, plan to picket outside the pub later today.

Three of the employees, Bill Harris, Susan Krappell and Maryann Campbell, were fired Tuesday night and the other two, Dawn Zowtuk and Christie Heron, were fired Wednesday, after they refused an order from the hotel's general manager to serve a young pub customer, they said.

The five had barred the customer two weeks ago, they said, after several months of harassment. They said they had cut the customer off several times for drinking too much and had already thrown him out of the pub three times.

"We're responsible for keeping order in the pub," Campbell said Tuesday. "When somebody drinks too much we cut him off and if there is consistently bad behaviour, we bar them."

Harris, who alternates between bartender and waiter in the pub, said the customer was consistently rude to the waitresses, "treated them like dirt and would swear at them."

"If someone persists in the harassment of staff, then it's an unwritten law that you bar him. We were just trying to keep some order in the bar."

All five of the fired employees feel they were doing their jobs when they barred the customer.

"If you never cut anyone off, it would turn into a slop house, the bar would go completely to pieces and you'd probably get fired for not doing your job," Harris said.

The real problem started about two weeks ago Harris said, when during a busy night at the pub, the young customer had, in their opinion, had too much to drink and was harassing his waitress, Dawn Zowtuk.

Zowtuk cut him off, but the young man went to the front office of the hotel to complain. He came back to the pub with two of the managers, but the employees told their side of the story to the managers and got their support Harris said.

The young customer however, stayed in the bar and continued his harassment of the employees and the decision was made to bar him.

2 Police Wounded In Edmonton Siege

EDMONTON (CP) — A 31-year-old Edmonton man surrendered late Wednesday after one policeman was wounded and another grazed by a bullet during an eight-hour siege that drew hundreds of curious spectators to an apartment block in the city's west end.

Samuel James Wood was charged with two counts of attempted murder and one of armed robbery following an afternoon bank holdup that led to the standoff.

Two other men who surrendered to police almost four hours earlier also were charged with attempted murder.

They were identified as Robert Joseph Lemaire, 38, of Edmonton, and Douglas Raymond Coumont, 24, who lived in the apartment building where the gunman was holed up.

At about 2:10 p.m., a man armed with a rifle escaped with about $1,400 from a branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia in a small west-end shopping centre.

Witnesses spotted the man running across the parking lot and entering a building in a nearby row of walkup apartments.

Two city police detectives were the first to arrive at the building. A door-to-door search led to a third-floor suite occupied by two men.

Going through the rooms, one detective was shot twice from behind a shower curtain in the bathroom.

A shout for help was answered by a nurse living in a second-floor suite. She attended the wounded policeman who was later lowered through a window to a waiting ambulance.

Mideast Accord Near?

Times News Services

TEL AVIV — Egypt and Israel have reached agreement on the general principles for a new interim peace accord, an Israeli government source said today.

Despite Egypt's threat to oust UN troops from the Sinai desert, negotiations on an interim accord could succeed, "if things are played right," the source added.

"The general principles are agreed," he said. "The principles on which the next agreement would be based are understood."

However, he cautioned that an Arab move to expel Israel from the United Nations could hinder the talks. (See also page 40)

"This would make the negotiations more difficult," he said. "But we will continue the negotiations."

The foreign ministers of 40 Islamic nations voted at a conference this week in Jidda, Saudi Arabia, to seek Israel's expulsion from the United Nations and other international organizations.

The Israeli source said it was too early to predict if such a move would succeed, but said if it did it would affect the operation of UN peace-keeping forces in the Middle East.

United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, meanwhile, held out hope that the UN peace-keeping forces in the Sinai will be permitted to continue operations despite Egyptian unwillingness.

Officials at the United Nations and in the U.S. government took the view that Egypt had not closed the door on an extension of the force beyond the July 24 deadline but was instead trying to press for progress toward a settlement.

Prince Bombed

NAHA, Okinawa (AP) Two young radicals hurled gasoline bombs at Japan's crown prince and princess on Okinawa today while in Tokyo hundreds of feuding radicals fought each other at a railway station, leaving one dead.

Crown Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko escaped injury in the attack shortly after arriving on a controversial three-day trip to Okinawa. One of the prince's aides was slightly injured when the two radicals jumped out of an underground tomb surrounded by trees and hurled the bombs, police said. One landed near the prince's foot and burst into flames.

Demonstrators are demanding a formal apology from Akihito's father, Emperor Hirohito, as an expression of responsibility for Okinawa's suffering during the Second World War when it was a major battleground. It remained under U.S. military control until 1972.

Hostage Negotiation—New Police Course

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

RCMP throughout B.C. will receive instruction in hostage negotiation as part of their regular training starting this fall, the Times has learned.

Sgt. Rodger Post, Victoria headquarters training officer, said in an interview Wednesday it is hoped the program will give RCMP officers a better insight into situations involving everything from domestic crises to international terrorism.

"We've had some sessions on crisis intervention over the past two years but now we're hoping to upgrade them," he said.

Post was one of 22 law enforcement officers, educators and officials from across the United States and Canada, and the only RCMP member, who attended the week-long Crisis Intervention Hostage Negotiation seminar in Toronto last month.

The seminar, sponsored by the International Association of Chiefs of Police, was prepared in the face of an increase in hostage-taking in North America, particularly in the U.S.

Post stressed, however, that in Canada, the emphasis will be on domestic situations.

"Fortunately, we haven't been involved to any great degree with hostage incidents in this country," he said.

But, he added, there was a high percentage here of "plain, out-and-out family fights where a family member is in effect a hostage, held by a knife or some other household weapon."

"It is something the public is rarely aware of, yet it is fairly common."

"More of our guys get it in just these kinds of situations than in almost any others they might investigate."

Post said the idea behind the upgraded training program was to change the policeman's image from "fastest gun in town" or man on patrol to that of "law enforcement therapist."

By therapist he means instilling in the officer an understanding not only of the psychological factors involved in crisis situations but also of the techniques that should be used to restore peace.

He said there can be no set policy as to how police should handle any given situation.

Beyond determining the criminal's reason for taking the hostage and what he might want in exchange, the situation demands the technique and not the other way around.

Although hostage-taking is not common in Canada, Post noted, it is becoming increasingly so in the U.S.

In New York City, for example, the police force has a 68-member hostage negotiation team. During 1974, the team acted on slightly more than 400 incidents and were successful in having hostages released alive and without serious injury in every case.

Post attributed the hostage-taking problem to the impact of the media and growth of extremism and militancy.

He did not feel extremism was necessarily applicable to Canada but the media — "that's the greatest source of ideas of would-be perpetrators.

"They see the news, read it or hear it . . . and the more widespread it is, the more people start getting ideas."

CRACKDOWN IS ON LUANDA LOOTING

LUANDA, Angola (UPI) — Portuguese security forces intervened early today to prevent the spread of banditry and looting sweeping across the city after a week-long battle between rival black nationalists.

Small arms fire crackled in a number of the abandoned white suburbs where roaming bands of Africans began ransacking homes for food and supplies. Portuguese military sources said their troops dispersed pillaging mobs.

The Portuguese high commissioner, Gen. Silva Cardosos, cabled the United Nations in Switzerland for urgent food supplies to ward off hunger and possible starvation among some 5,000 homeless whites camping in the grounds of his government palace.

They fled the terror of running street battles between the now victorious communist-backed Angolan Liberation Movement and the National Front.

Lisbon Gov't Goes

LISBON — The military's ruling revolutionary council dissolved the remnants of Portugal's coalition government today soon after the Popular Democrats followed the Socialists in pulling out of the cabinet.

The move left only the minority Communists as allies of Portugal's military leaders who said they would form a new "non-partisan" cabinet of military officers and left-wing technocrats.

Both the Socialists and Popular Democrats called mass rallies in northern Portugal to pursue their struggle against the possible formation of a Communist dictatorship.

The Manchester Guardian, in a Lisbon dispatch, meanwhile, says Portugal will again be under a military dictatorship before the weekend according to popular sentiment there.

Politically, a situation has been reached where instead of a single crystalized opposition such as that which faced the former regime the country's rulers have now a front of opponents adhering to various political denominations from the extreme right to the extreme left, the report adds.

Politically and socially the Armed Forces Movement is already encountering passive resistance within the cadres of public officials both inside the country and in the diplomatic and consular services, and they simply have no machinery to identify their enemies.

3,000 COME TO TEA

More than 3,000 people from all parts of the province accepted invitations to today's garden party at Government House.

Invitations were extended by Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen and Mrs. Owen to everyone who signed the guest books at Government House and their home on Angus Driive in Vancouver during the past year.

The Naden armed forces band provided music at today's annual event and will also perform at Government House Friday afternoon when the Owens host about 500 blind people from Victoria and other parts of Vancouver Island.

Police Siege

After the shooting, the gunman took position at a third-storey window facing a quiet residential street, then teeming with police reinforcements.

One bullet shattered the windshield of a police cruiser and struck the officer at the wheel in the chest. The policeman was saved from serious injury when the bullet lodged in a training manual he carried in his breast pocket.

Upwards of 30 police officers, specially-trained in siege tactics, moved to ring the building and evacuate remaining tenants.

Telephone communication was established with the gunman, who police said appeared to be high on drugs or alcohol or both.

The gunman said he had plenty of ammunition and at one point claimed to have an explosive device.

A request for a police hostage was ignored. At one point the gunman asked that his two friends be returned to the scene, where he said he would clear them of any involvement.

At 10:18 p.m., with still no sign of surrender, police moved in, firing tear-gas canisters into the rear of the building.

Crude Oil Price Hike Warning

An increase in the wholesale price of crude oil products in B.C. in inevitable, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Wednesday.

But the increase will be set by the B.C. Energy Commission, which is analysing applications by at least two companies, not the federal cabinet, he said.

He made the comments in response to announcements that Imperial Oil and Gulf Oil intend to increase by 5 cents a gallon the price of wholesale petroleum products by Aug. 15.

"The pricing of gasoline is a matter of our provincial responsibility and we . . . are assuming that jurisdiction and have for the last year and a half," Macdonald said.

"I understand that (federal energy minister Donald) Thumper Macdonald asked the oil companies to say when they will be increasing the price of gasoline in the province of B.C. and the oil companies have now responded by saying Aug. 15," he said.

"But they have to come to the B.C. Energy Commission and ask for permission — its up to it to say yes or no.

"I suppose a price increase is inevitable because of the federal government's action in its budget. But how much and when is being considered.

"In the past our boys have shown a sharp pencil and they're popularity with the international oil companies is at an all-time low," he said.

Meanwhile, federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald told the Commons Wednesday that oil companies will be expected to justify any and all of the gasoline and other oil product price increases scheduled to come into effect Aug. 15.

Companies the federal government discovers are overcharging customers will be expected to roll back the price increase to levels considered reasonable by Ottawa, he warned. The companies will also have to compensate all customers charged the higher-than-acceptable prices, Macdonald said.

Companies refusing to follow what seem to be an undefined set of re-imposed federal oil product price restraints will "run the risk" of a reduction in the federal imported oil compensation program paid in Eastern Canada, Macdonald added.

Five Pub Employees To Picket Empress

The customer threatened to get his lawyer in on the act and the lawyer phoned the hotel and suggested his client apologize.

"He (the customer) came to the pub and said he had been instructed to apologize, but really he was just laughing at us. We said we would not serve him and that he had been barred."

The customer again got his parents and his lawyer into the situation, Harris said, and the general manager of the hotel told the customer his apology was accepted and that he would be served.

Tuesday, before Harris, Krappell and Campbell started their shift, they were told by their boss they had to serve the man.

"He came in at 10 p.m. and we said we would not serve him. He went to the front office and came back with the manager and we were fired," Harris said.

Zowtuk and Heron, who were off shift Tuesday night, went in Wednesday and said they would also refuse to serve the man. Heron said early today they were subsequently fired.

Clem Michaels, chairman of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Transport and General Workers Union at the Empress, said today there is some dispute about whether the five were fired or quit.

"I have been informed they are being held out of service for investigation," he said.

"If they walked out and left the floor, then they quit."

He said there is a grievance procedure set out in the union contract that should be followed in such cases.

He has asked all five of the employees to write out their reasons for refusing to serve the customer.

Michaels said he understood that after the meeting between the general manager, Ted Balderson, and the customer and his lawyer "it was decided after due consideration that if the customer apologized then he would be reinstated.

"Our agreement calls for service to continue and a grievance to be launched. You can't just walk out."

Michaels said he expects the investigation to be completed in a few days.

Balderson was not available for comment.

New Hospital Hinted As Priority Replacement

The Regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission hinted Wednesday night that a new hospital may replace the old one now operated at St. Mary's Priory in Langford.

In formally confirming the roles several area hospitals will play in regional health care, it approved a statement which says "... the future use of the St. Mary's Priory hospital will be given consideration relating to the replacement of the institution on its existing site."

The 95-bed hospital, which provides long-term care for elderly women, is operated by a Catholic religious community, the Society of the Love of Jesus.

Control of the society has been clouded until recently by litigation but the society is now understood to be considering turning the hospital over to a public society and selling the property on Goldstream, possibly to some health authority.

The commission assigned Lady Minto Hospital on Salt Spring Island the role of small community hospital, providing medical and limited surgical, obstetric and pediatric care, with more complicated cases referred to Victoria's two general hospitals. Lady Minto will also continue to provide some long-term care for mostly elderly patients.

Resthaven Hospital in Sidney will continue to provide acute care until that work can be taken over by an expanded Saanich Peninsula Hospital on Mount Newton Crossroad. Future of Resthaven after that will be determined as regional hospital plans develop.

Of the nine area hospitals now providing long-term care, the commission's role statement says: "The philosophy of treatment and operation is the prerogative of each individual institution but the overall aim of the extended care facilities must be the provision of a humane and stimulating environment."

In other business, the commission approved in principle renovations at Victoria General estimated to cost $1.9 million, noting the hospital will be needed at full capacity for at least several years while a replacement hospital is planned and built somewhere in the northwest sector of the community.

At the same time, it decided to withhold approval from the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society for an in-service training and auditorium area the society wants to include in additions to Glengarry Hospital.

The commission has authority over all regional hospital planning but the society took its plans for this part of the addition directly to the provincial Hospital Programs branch. It is the latest in a series of administrative moves which has generated friction between society and commission.

The commission will not consider the project until it receives an application for it from the society administration.

ARMY TRIED LSD TESTS

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The University of Maryland Medical School and the U.S. Army tested LSD on hundreds of civilians and soldiers — including some soldiers who did not know they were being given the drug — in experiments during the late 1950s, according to civilian researchers in the program.

The experiments were conducted under a contract between the army's Chemical Centre, now known as Edgewood Arsenal, in northeast Maryland, and the university medical school's Psychiatric Institute in Baltimore.

The researchers said LSD and even more powerful hallucinogens were tested on persons at both locations.

In addition to testing the drug on knowing volunteers in laboratory settings, experimenters gave LSD to at least one group of five to 10 soldiers at Edgewood without their knowledge, to test their reaction while under its influence.

Several university researchers criticized this practice, one of the program's senior research officials said Wednesday, but the program continued from 1956 until at least 1959.

The research official, who asked that his name not be used, said the army also tested LSD at its Aberdeen proving ground equipment-testing facility in northern Maryland.

LSD was given to soldiers there, the research official said, to determine their ability to handle complex equipment while under its influence.

The purpose of the testing at Edgewood and Aberdeen, the research official said, was to determine LSD's effectiveness as an offensive weapon in wartime.

He said he was told several times by the army's senior civilian official in charge of the project that the hallucinogens were being tested for use on "foreign individuals and populations."

One researcher said there were "some close calls" at the beginning of the testing program on human subjects — including one man who had to be sent to hospital and who remained in serious condition for several weeks.

The Rockefeller Commission report said the Central Intelligence Agency was involved in testing LSD on volunteer and some unsuspecting subjects, including one army scientist who later committed suicide. Sources, however, did not know of any CIA connection with the Edgewood project.

Wood Peace Hopes High

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon, special mediator in the British Columbia forest industry dispute, said Wednesday he is hopeful "tentative agreement on a great number of issues" will be reached by Saturday.

The B.C. Supreme Court justice said his report should be completed within the 21-day period specified by Labor Minister Bill King, and that some public hearings might be scheduled next week.

Representatives of the Internatinal Woodworkers of America, the Canadian Paperworkers Union, the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada and the forest industry agreed Wednesday to continue their mediated talks.

Mr. Justice Hutcheon outlined plans for four days of intensive private and joint meetings.

The first mediated meeting came soon after B.C.'s 20 pulp mills were shut down by a strike by 12,000 CPU and PPWC members.

In the coastal and southern interior regions, unsanctioned walkouts by some of the 35,000 IWA members threatened total closure of the forest industry withing days.

The IWA officially agreed to delay a strike until the mediator's report is complete. The contract for 29,000 coast workers expired June 15, while the contract for 8,000 southern interior woodworkers expired June 30, the same expiry date as the pulp unions.

Companies have offered to extend the current cost-of-living clause for a year, with no accompanying pay increase. The cost-of-living clause now adds 24 cents an hour, and increases one cent an hour for every .35 increase in the Consumer Price-Index.

A cost-of-living increase was set for July 1 and would have produced an increase of nine cents an hour, but Forest Industrial Relations, representing the companies in IWA coast negotiations, cancelled the master agreement in an unprecedented move in June.

Industry spokesmen say the IWA is asking for a complete package worth $5 an hour, while the pulp unions want a package worth $9 an hour. The package also includes health and welfare pension, vacation pay, shift differential and overtime.

Juvenile Act Needs Changes

While the Times generally supports the provincial government's treatment of juvenile offenders the Juvenile Delinquents Act is in need of updating. In a recent New Westminster rape case 13 persons were involved in an incident where a 15-year-old girl was the victim. Four of the persons involved received jail sentences ranging from one and one half years to five years. Eight of those involved were juveniles. A stay of proceedings was ordered because the juvenile's evidence was needed to convict four adults who also took part. Charges against the juveniles could be reactivated but attorney general's department sources say this would be unlikely.

No deals were made with the young persons and their case is said to be under review. But that doesn't obscure the fact that under the legislation the only penalties that can be imposed upon a juvenile are a $25 fine, a probation term or a suspended disposition. A crown prosecutor is not going to waste the court's time for such minor penalties, unless the offence is in keeping with the punishment. Juveniles can be raised to adult court for serious offences, although this requires approval by the prosecutor, a representative of the provincial attorney-general's department and a representative from the human resources department. And, of course, if a juvenile is raised to adult court it is conceivable he will end up in an adult prison where he can be influenced by hardened criminals.

Adult penitentiaries are not the place for juvenile offenders. At the same time if young persons alleged to have committed serious offences such as rape, assault, murder or even perjury are allowed to get off scot free what kind of attitude will they have towards organized society? More important, the permissive attitude of the law will encourage them to commit the offence again, knowing they face only a minor penalty for a gross act.

Clearly the juvenile act should be changed so penalties will match grave offences. Attorney-General Macdonald has promised "secure facilities" in both Vancouver and Victoria for some types of juvenile offenders. As yet it remains unclear if the proposed institutions could handle sentences of one year or more. As one disgusted crown prosecutor put it: "Our juvenile system is such that it is almost useless." Beginning with the police officer, through the judicial system, those concerned must ask themselves, is it worth it to arrest or prosecute a young person if the courts will be forced to administer only a slap on the wrist? The answer is usually "no."

This does not mean that every young offender should receive adult treatment in the courts. First offenders or even repeated minor infractions should be dealt with by fines or probations. Even offences such as shoplifting or car theft should not result in incarceration for first offences. A lot of rehabilitation can be done before a person is slapped in jail. The way our prisons are, it is a last resort, the same as giving up on a human being. But rape, assault or murder are of a different order than property crimes. The current system is a travesty of justice. Not only does it leave society prey to cynical young people, it says in effect they are not responsible for their acts until they cross an arbitrary line in chronological age. That is stupid. So is the government if it doesn't change the Juvenile Delinquents Act.

". . . now in the last six bars where we call out to God, I want it solid and loud and clear . . . remember, He's a long way from here . . ."

A Legislative Antiquity

Justice Minister Otto Lang's recent announcement that the Lord's Day Act will be referred to the federal law reform commission certainly didn't light any fires or cause any great commotion at large. It definitely isn't one of the more actively-invoked statutes of Canada.

The old Sunday blue laws of our grandparents, which made downtown streets safe enough on the Sabbath to fire a cannon, make for funny reading. It's little more than a decade since the 300-year-old Sunday observance laws enacted by the British parliament were repealed in this province, which adopted them holus bolus in 1858.

They prevented the profaning of Sunday by such activities as bear and bull-baiting, and dramatic productions and the traffic of wagons and carts and cattle drives and the slaughter or sale of "victuals" by butchers. In default of the prescribed fine of three shillings fourpence for bear and bull-baiting, the offender was liable to be "set publicly in the stocks" for three hours.

Laugh heartily. The present Lord's Day Act, chapter 171 of the revised Statutes of Canada issued just five years ago, contains no such archaisms, but it has its own peculiarities. It is illegal to this day to sell foreign newspapers on Sunday, or to be part of, or merely present at, a sports event where an admission fee is charged.

The key section of the act prohibits any business transaction or sale on Sunday, but a review of the cases on the record show a tendency by officialdom usually to pick on grocery stores and other shops. Sports events and tourist attractions and restaurants seem to have been left alone, although they appear to operate outside the law on Sunday as well. A case of justice being blind in one eye only?

Hopefully, the law reform commission will wait a respectable period, then recommend abolition of this piece of legal hypocrisy. Clearly there are some things which cannot be legislated, and observance of Sunday as a day of worship and rest is one of them.

The idea of forcing agnostics, Jews, non-believers and other non-Christians to observe Sunday by law along with the majority (by no means large) of church-going Canadians should be repugnant to Canadians. As our political leaders learned — slowly, very slowly — with Canada's drug and drinking laws, morality cannot be legislated. Neither can church attendance.

JAMES GRAY

Ignoring Canada's Alcoholism

CALGARY — While this city is celebrating the arrival of the North West Mounted Police in pursuit of the whisky traders who were debauching the Indians, history has been making one of its historic circles in the northwest.

A hundred years ago while Fort Calgary was being built, whisky traders were pursuing the fast buck regardless of the consequences to the debauchees.

Last week the booze trade at Fort Simpson in the Northwest Territories was whooping it up, protesting the efforts of the Indians to protect themselves from the boozy temptations of that community.

The annual Indian-Metis convention was to be held in Fort Simpson to discuss a number of pressing issues at the time treaty money was to be paid. Indian leaders petitioned the Northwest Territories government to close down the liquor outlets in the town for the duration of the convention.

Whose Rights?

The Indians argued that if the liquor outlets were open, too many delegates would spend too much time in the taverns and too little at the conveiton. For previous conventions, sites were chosen where liquor was not obtainable. They chose Fort Simpson only in the belief it could be turned into a prohibition enclave for the week. The N.W.T. administration acceded to the request and ordered the outlets closed, with predictable results.

An angry town council called the action an impingement on the rights of the council to function in the town. It demanded instant rescinding of the order so that the booze trade, presumably would be free to serve Indians and whites alike, regardless of the inability of many Indians to cope with alcohol beverages.

That the impact of booze on Indian society is becoming as horrendous in 1975 as it was in 1875 is increasingly apparent. Drunkenness on the reserves has reached such proportions that some bands have begun to agitate for a return of prohibition to the reserves. As the drift of the Indians from the reserves to the cities increases so does social concern for the alcoholic problem among Indians.

But it is seldom raised in public now because those who raise it fear of being denounced as racist.

At Fort Simpson, even a modicum of sympathy for the problems of the Indians might have suggested a reasonable compromise. The whites could simply have stocked up on booze to wait out the drought and thus accommodate the desires of the Indians.

ALCOHOL
. . . Indians asking for prohibition

Instead the incident was quickly expanded into a threat to everybody's civil rights and fundamental freedoms.

The episode is an indication how the whole problem of alcoholism is being swept under the rug in white as well as in Indian society. On one hand, a full one-third of the prisoners in jails in the west are Indians, who are there for alcohol-related offences. On the other hand, white alcoholism is described by medical authorities as the country's primary health problem, and a third to a half of the traffic deaths in the west have alcohoic overtones.

In Calgary, a special detective squad investigates all accidental deaths, probing deeply into all events preceding the tragedy. They are discovering that alcohol is involved, in one side or the other, in over half of all traffic fatalites.

The chairman of the police commission in Calgary has been criticizing the attorney-general's department for its cavalier attitude toward drunks who drive cars, on two counts in particular.

Administrative Problem

Recently he criticized the way prosecutors were allowing "administrative diffieulties" to justify less than adequate prosecution. Instead of convicted drunks whose licence has been suspended being charged with not producing a licence on being caught twice, they are charged with not producing a license when requested. The difference is getting off with a nominal fine instead of going to jail.

Some months ago attention was called to the way in which repeaters in drunken driving cases all treated as first offenders and are not charged with being second offenders. Again the difference was between paying a nominal fine and going to jail. In both cases the prosecutors pleaded administrative difficulty and went on being lenient.

In Alberta, the government's attitude seems to be that all such problems will solve themselves if it continues to ignore them, while it continues to expand its liquor sales with all possible haste. Unlike the administration of the Northwest Territories, it is unlikely that it could ever be persuaded by the Indians to lend a hand in their efforts to control their own drinking problems.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Unions' Smothering Embrace

Edward Broadbent must be a brave or peculiarly innocent young man. He has undertaken to design a detailed new economic system for Canada and make the New Democratic Party electable. But he surely knows by now that the Liberal party will always move leftwards enough to outflank him at any cost to its principles and the public treasury.

Mackenzie King, whose principles changed with the weather of politics, invented this strategy when Canadian socialism was in its cradle. Pierre Trudeau, the ex-socialist, retraced the master's winding path and it still leads to victory. Those old hobgoblins of consistency that afflict little minds seldom trouble modern Liberalism or Conservatism. Broadbent also will do what he has to do, as occasion demands, regardless of any solemn resolutions passed by his party's recent convention.

Unanswerable Question

It would be quite wrong, however, to suppose that the party elected in three provinces is a failure in national politics because it elects few members to parliament. On the contrary it is, from its own point of view, a magnificent success. Never coming within sight of office, it has watched most of its social welfare policies implemented by others, the wild surmises of the Regina manifesto or at least all that were more than dream stuff now firmly installed as the nation's way of life.

Whether this would have happened anyhow without the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation and its successor the NDP to advocate it, is a nice question, but impossible to answer. But it has happened in Canada as elsewhere, and it comes out of a long, curious history, not usually remembered.

From the beginning Canadian socialism was the unlikely transatlantic offspring and spiritual heir of the British Labor party. In that respect it differed entirely from the labor movement of the United States, a native product. Step by step, with a time lag of a generation or two, Canada's society has followed the British economic revolution which survived the empire and, almost absentmindedly, was exported (without British democracy) to the former colonies and many additional nations.

If Broadbent is as wise as his four predecessors, J. S. Coldwell, T. C. Douglas and David Lewis, he will observe in this history not only success but sudden danger. For socialism, in its British heartland, has travelled an unforeseen, unplanned circle and finds itself today at a daunting watershed, or a dead end.

ED BROADBENT

Elected mainly by its allies of the labor unions, it is trying desperately to make them accept the facts of real life which, as Prime Minister Harold Wilson says, would face Britain under any system of right or left. And that, precisely, will be Broadbent's problem tomorrow. How can he deal with the Canadian unions? How can he ask Canada to imitate Britian's disastrous example?

Broadbent talks grandly, and no doubt sincerely, about a new, perfected socialism in Canada, his superior version of Trudeau's fading ideal, the just society. But if he has normal eyesight he sees that the unions, his political base, are moving in the opposite direction, consciously or unconsciously.

They accept no state planning, not even Finance Minister John Turner's pathetic plea for restraint, if such plans conflict with their wage claims and increasing share of a diminished pie. They do not organize, work, and strike to help the government or the NDP but, quite naturally, to help themselves. By their nature, whether they know it or not, the unions are an instrument, nowadays the most powerful instrument, of what we call rather quaintly the private enterprise system. Their current power, freedom and ambition have no place in other systems.

Different Doctrines

The American unions have always understood that obvious fact and always rejected socialism as their natural enemy. The Canadian unions, like the British, have never fully grasped it yet. The plumbers of Toronto, for instance, who have just won annual wages and fringe benefits of $28,496, are among the chief beneficiaries of private enterprise. They and others like them have no reason to favor socialism which must control and discipline them if it is to impose any coherent national plan at all.

In any case, Broadbent will have no chance to impose his own plan, whatever it may be, since he has no chance of forming a national government in the visible future. He can only chip away at the existing and constantly changing system, perhaps to improve it, perhaps not.

He can only preach the brotherhood of mankind and deplore the hunger of its majority while preaching, at home, the good old Conservative doctrine of economic protectionism and outpromising the Liberal promise of unlimited abundance for Canadians; not necessarily foreigners.

As a practical politician he can only hope that the labor unions, in their symbiotic love-hate life with the business managers, will not smother him by their friendly embrace as they have almost smothered the British Labor party.

Don't Rock the Boat

A comment concerning the editorial on Friday regarding the decision of the Greater Victoria Library Board to continue the audio-visual and film services without restrictions.

It is unfortunate that the editor of the Times does not get his facts straight before writing such an editorial. I would like to place these facts before him and the taxpayer who foots the bill.

The costs of library services continue to mount, and the director Mr. Miller, and his staff, in attempting to increase and improve these services do not seem to realize that the day of reckoning is here. Let's make it quite clear; this is exactly what they should be doing, otherwise, they would not be doing their job, and it is the duty of the board to set the priorities and to evaluate what services we can afford.

The Greater Victoria Library Board is bound together under a very fragile agreement, and if any of the municipalities refuses to accept the budget they may opt out, and the whole agreement terminates. This year Central Saanich refused to accept the budget and as of the end of this year will no longer be a member of the Greater Victoria Library Board. Their reasoning — and rightly so — they cannot afford the costs and are joining the Vancouver Island Regional Library. Who will be next?

A new, perhaps more fragile agreement has to be drawn this year in order to continue the Greater Victoria Library Board. The whole future of this system as it now operates is in serious doubt. Unless the four core municipalities can arrive at a satisfactory agreement, unless the board can be made to understand that costs must be controlled, we could be looking at a fragmented operation and this would be a very retrograde step.

The alternative is to agree to the proposal of the Library Development Commission which is to operate under the Capital Regional District umbrella. Although this would increase the grant from the Commission from 5 per cent to 20 per cent, it scares the hell out of municipal councils because they know how the costs would escalate under this organization.

So please Mr. Editor, do not rock the boat. The board has supplied a new service — talking books for the use of the blind and handicapped. This is a service which should be supported as it serves a need for people which cannot be supplied by any other agency. But it is of paramount importance to curtail those services which are duplicated by other agencies, and personally, I feel the board is negligent in its duty in allowing unrestricted audio-visual and film servies which can be supplied by other agencies. — Ald. Clyde Savage, Victoria.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of July 18, 1915

Theodore Rooseveit, ex-president of the United States, visited Victoria briefly this afternoon and spoke publicly at the causeway corner prior to calling at Government House. He was met at the CPR dock by Premier Sir Richard McBride and a party of local officials. When the crowd blocked the path of his automobile at Belleville and the causeway, he addressed the large numbers gathered. "It is magnificent indeed that you people should have come forward so promptly to the mother of the nation. That you have raised 150,000 men for service is wonderful, and the part of Canada in this conflict already has been written with deeds of heroism and bravery that the world has recognized and which will live forever." Roosevelt would not comment on various questions put to him regarding U.S. politics, and said he hasn't made up his mind yet whether to run again for president.

Two Nations in Space: A Lopsided Co-operation

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
Washington Post

However one looks at the Apollo-Soyuz docking mission in space, it seems to bear some resemblance to the 1972 wheat sale to the Soviet Union.

Consider the fact that the United States built the mechanism to allow the three-man Apollo to link up with the two-man Soyuz. The same 10-foot-long docking device will serve as airlock for the three Americans and two Russians making the flight to move freely between each other's spacecraft. There are few rubles and little Soviet know-how in this piece of equipment, built as it is with $46 million of American money and the more than 10 years of experience that Rockwell International brings to the spacecraft business.

The two spacecraft could never manoeuvre together in the black seas of space if it weren't for the size of the American Apollo, more than twice as big as the smaller Soyuz. Its size gives the Apollo big enough fuel tanks to hold almost 3,000 pounds of manoeuvring fuel. Soyuz can take on less than 300 pounds . . .

For this reason, the Apollo spacecraft will manage the entire rendezvous. It will seek, find and home in on the Soyuz, using its rich fuel supply to fly to the rendezvous and dock with the Soviet spacecraft. This is why the Soyuz was launched seven hours before the Apollo, so it could wait passively in space for Apollo to reach it.

The Apollo will also maintain the course of the two spacecraft during the two days they're docked, again using its manoeuvring fuel to fly against the pulls and spins of the earth below. The only times the Soyuz will use its own fuel is when it climbs into space alone and comes back down alone at the end of the flight.

There's something else that Apollo is contributing to the rendezvous. A VHF (Very High Frequency) radio ranging system conceived and built nine years ago to assist the astronauts coming up off the moon in locating their mother ship in lunar orbit.

The Russians have nothing like this radio ranging device, possibly because they never flew two spacecraft whose pilots had to search for each other 60 miles above the moon and 250,000 miles from earth. Whatever the reason, the radio ranging equipment built for Apollo will be used aboard both Apollo and Soyuz.

It is a priceless piece of electronics. It will let Cosmonaut Leonov talk to Astronaut Stafford at the same time that Cosmonaut Kubasov and Astronauts Slayton and Brand are advised how far apart they are, down to distances measured in feet. All this at speeds of 17,500 miles an hour 120 miles above the earth, between two spacecraft that started out from earth half a world apart.

Few space experts are concerned about the safety of the flight, but if one spacecraft is crippled while both are docked, observers frankly hope it's the Russian craft. Apollo is big enough to bring all five crewmen back to earth, albeit with the cosmonauts under the astronauts' couches in cramped style. Soyuz can barely accommodate its two cosmonauts in any style.

"There is absolutely no room for any American to come down with two cosmonauts," Astronaut Eugene Cernan said after a close examination of Soyuz. "It is just physically too impossible to put more than two men in this vehicle."

In the spirit that is still detente, both the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. rationalize the Apollo-Soyuz flight as the first infant steps toward the day when space rescue becomes a possibility. In a narrow sense, that's correct. Two spacecraft from the earth's only space-faring nations will demonstrate a common docking system for the first time. But docking doesn't mean rescue, unless American astronauts were being sent into space to rescue Soviet cosmonauts. Rescue implies help coming from either side.

Nevertheless, it is a beginning. Better that the U.S. and U.S.S.R. explore space together than to go it alone. Former astronaut Michael Collins put it a little differently: "I think it's a very hopeful thing. For Americans and Russians to put their lives on the line and in each other's hands really requires a great deal of mutural trust." That's what it's all about.

But that's not how it all began. It began with the Soviet Union's being beaten to the moon. It began with the realization in Moscow that the Soviet Union was a distant second in the space race. It came with the cold understanding that U.S. space technology was superior and that U.S. space management was infinitely superior. Few space watchers believed the Soviet Union could manage a manned lunar landing or the in-flight repair job that kept the Skylab space station at work for almost a year.

So the Soviets opted for detente. They opted for detente at the same time Richard M. Nixon opted for detente. Nixon saw the political possibilities as soon as the Soviets raised the technological possibilities. The docking mission was first proposed in 1971. The docking mission would keep thousands on the job in Florida and California, two key states in Nixon's drive for re-election in 1972.

The engineers in Houston mocked the docking mission, cynically calling it "the $250 million handshake." But they accepted the pay cheques the docking mission financed the last three years. The astronauts making the mission happily began studying Russian. They'd study Arabic if it helped them into space.

One aim of all this has been to open up the Soviet space program to American eyes, and that's worked to some degree. The Soviets gave us samples of moon dust returned by their robot Luna spacecraft. They've told us what we need to know about Soyuz and given us some of the details of their Mars missions. They've even let our astronauts and their managers in to see the Soyuz launch pad at the cosmodrome in Tyuratam.

There's a lot more they still keep secret. It came as a surprise that the Soyuz 18 crew might still be in orbit aboard the Salyut space station when the crews of Apollo-Soyuz reach orbit together. Their future plans for manned spaceflight are as shrouded today as they were before detente, whereas they know pretty well which directions our space shuttle will take.

Do the Russians plan to fly men to the moon? What are the prospects for a Soviet space station? Are they developing a reusable space shuttle as we are? Is there a rocket bigger than the Saturn 5 moon rocket now on a Soviet launch pad that will serve as a mainstay for all their future manned flight plans?

So far, nothing is forthcoming out of Moscow on any of these questions. It will be interesting to see if anything comes forth when the Apollo-Soyuz mission comes to a close later this month.

The Death of a Cosmonaut

Atlas World Press Review

In the spring of 1967 Soviet cosmonaut Col. Vladimir Komarov perished when his space vehicle incinerated while reentering the earth's atmosphere. Now, eight years later, Die Welt of Hamburg, flagship of the conservative Axel Springer media empire, has published a report of Komarov's final hours—a story which the Soviet authorities have known all along, as did officials of the U.S. National Security Agency, who did not want the Russians to know that they knew. AMERICANS LISTENED TO KOMAROV'S LAST WORD was the headline over the article, which appeared on May 8.

" 'Well, do something—I don't want to die!' This was the last anguished plea of Soviet cosmonaut Col. Vladimir Komarov, age 40, before he was incinerated when his crippled Soyuz space craft reentered the earth's atmosphere. While Komarov pleaded for help, spoke for the last time with his wife, and heard some comforting words from Premier Kosygin, Winslow Peck and other National Security Agency technicians at a U.S. airbase in Instanbul listened in on the dramatic exchange. Recently in Washington Peck talked for the first time about those 12 critical hours on April 24, 1967, when he and his colleagues tuned in on the drama in space as the Soviet ground station desperately attempted to bring the tumbling capsule under control.

KOMAROV . . . last words recorded

"As the tragedy was unfolding Komarov's wife, Valentina, spoke with her husband. 'I love you—I love you,' she stammered again and again. Komarov's metallic voice answered: 'I love you, too. You and the baby.'

"Ground control switched in with some new instructions but were unable to stop the tumbling. Then Valentina was on the air again. But Komarov could stand no more: 'Now go home,' he rasped, 'Go on home.' Later he received still more instructions from ground control, all to no avail. In an emotion-choked voice Komarov replied: 'I'm doing it, I'm doing it—but it isn't working.'

" 'I simply can't describe how terrible it was,' said Peck. 'Yet at the same time it was enormously moving, because one of the last conversations the cosmonaut had with his countrymen was a deeply emotional exchange with Soviet Premier Kosygin.'

"At first the Soyuz capsule was spinning on its own axis at regular intervals. But after five hours, despite all efforts at working the controls the tumbling grew worse and worse. Komarov reported the continual spinning nauseated him. Every so often he would ask: 'How much longer to reentry?' He asked how many minutes he had to live.

"Then a new voice cut in. Kosygin was speaking from his private office in the Kremlin. 'You and your peers have achieved the greatest accomplishments in Soviet history,' he said. 'We are proud of you and shall never forget what you have done.'

"Komarov's answer was lost in static. Then he cried out: 'You've got to do something. I don't want to die!'

"You could hear his cries for awhile—then everything went dead. Someone at the space centre said: 'It's all over.' "

Double-Digit Dragons

russell baker

Everybody said King Arthur was a swell guy. He reminded people of Jerry Ford. So open and aboveboard. Not like that swine Merlin, who had always played his cards so close to his chest.

"Doesn't King Artie remind you of old Jerry?" everybody said. Everybody called him King Artie, and sometimes just plain Art.

One day King Arthur was sitting around the Round Table whipping the knights at mumbley-peg when Sir Lancelot burst in with the latest dragon statistics.

Lancelot was not one of the King's favorites. It was not just because he was always sparking Guinevere in the grape arbor. Lancelot was one of those knights who wasn't happy unless he was doing something.

"Have you seen the latest statistics on gross national dragons?" asked Lancelot. The King looked at the statistics like a swell guy. Dragons were up 14 per cent in the second quarter. If he hadn't been so sweet tempered, the news would have spoiled his day.

"But this is wonderful news, Art," said Sir Gawain, chairman of the King's Council on Dragonic Affairs. "The increase in gross national dragons during the same period last year was 17 per cent. This year it's only 14 per cent. We ought to issue a press release announcing that the dragons have bottomed out."

Lancelot protested. Bottoming out or not, he said, there were already so many dragons breathing so much fire through the streets of Camelot that half the steeds in the kingdom had permanent scorch marks.

King Arthur was patient with Lancelot. Lancelot had a lot of clout. If rubbed the wrong way, he might get into armor and do something, which would be expensive. Lancelot sometimes seemed to believe that shillings grew on trees. Or was it groats that were being used for money in Camelot just then? Not that it mattered. Shillings or groats — it wasn't worth much. If people kept doing things — which was expensive — it would be worth nothing at all.

"How about a little mumbley-peg?" the King suggested to Lancelot.

"Artie," said Lancelot. "We've got to do something."

King Arthur winced. He was pleased when Sir Tristram argued that since the dragons were already bottoming out under the King's policy of not doing anything about them, they would probably bottom away altogether if the King simply ignored them.

"Oh, yeah?" said Lancelot. "What about these?" And he tossed the latest captured-maiden statistics on the Round Table. They showed that captured maidens were up 2 per cent, seasonally adjusted over the previous year.

Almost 10 per cent of all the maidens in Camelot were now held captive by dragons, Lancelot observed. It was the worst captive-maiden situation in 35 years. The Round Table had to saddle up its steeds and get cracking, said Lancelot, or every maiden in Camelot would be chained up in caves and towers cooking for dragons before the year was out.

King Arthur, who didn't think it was the government's business to rescue maidens, pointed out that an ambitious effort would cost a lot of money, money that was desperately needed to support Sir Galahad's search for the Holy Grail. Nevertheless, being a swell guy, he wanted to do something to hold down maiden captures.

Sir Gawain suggested a program of summer jousts. This would attract a lot of maidens to the safety of the joust stadium at a time of year when maidens might otherwise go strolling in the woods and become prey to dragons foraging for domestic help. The knights could have fun jousting, and the costs would be negligible.

King Arthur liked it, but Lancelot was furious. He demanded a broad-scale maiden-rescue program. King Arthur was undecided. He hated to have maidens in captivity, but he also hated the idea of government getting entangled in human-reptilian relationships.

"Listen, Artie," said Sir Tristram, "don't do anything foolish. Since the dragons are bottoming out, the rate of maiden capture is bound to decline naturally. In the meantime, we can live a year or two with 10 per cent captivity."

"What's more," said Sir Gawain, "a lot of these maidens have been captured for so long, they wouldn't know what to do if they were freed."

"Let's face it, Artie," said Sir Gawain, "a lot of these maidens are loafers and idlers who like being captives."

"And don't forget," said Sir Tristram, "while it's true that the captive-maiden statistics are rising, thanks to the population increase, there are more uncaptured maidens in Camelot today than ever before."

Lancelot was disgusted. He mounted his steed to go on a rescue. Sadly, King Arthur lifted Excalibur and cut his saddle off for the good of Camelot. Everybody liked that, all right, because King Arthur was a swell guy.

Chauffeurs Trained to Outrace, Outwit Kidnappers

PROTECTING COMPANY BOSSES

SAN FRANCISCO (WP) — Ramon Santos is an executive chauffeur for a major U.S.-based multinational corporation.

One moonless night, he was driving along a deserted road in Sonoma County, 30 miles north of San Francisco, when a speeding car emerged from the darkness and bore down on his company limousine.

"Things happened so fast, I couldn't think, only react, he recalled. "I was so involved in trying to get away, there wasn't even time to be scared."

The frantic bumper-to-bumper chase lasted 15 minutes on the serpentine country road at speeds exceeing 80 m.p.h.

At one point, the pursuer pulled alongside and attempted to bring the limousine to a halt, but Ramon cooly locked his rear wheels with the hand brake, spun 180 degrees and doubled back before the would-be kidnapper could react.

He eventually escaped by stealing off the main road and sitting quietly in a field with his headlights off as the phantom sped harmlessly by.

Ramon had passed the test. The "chase" was nothing more than a nerve-wracking game. Along with six other chauffeurs from his company, Ramon had just completed the final phase of a unique Corporate Driving Course at Bob Bondurant's School of High Performance Driving.

In response to constantly escalating terrorism around the world aimed at the employees of multinationals, the chauffeurs of some of America's most powerful executives are being trained by professional race drivers at the Sears Point raceway here to outrun and outdrive potential kidnappers.

The instruction began discreetly in October 1973, when the security chief for a major oil company approached Bondurant, who teaches advance driving techniques to professional race drivers and stuntmen.

He asked Bondurant to train seven company chauffeurs in anti-terrorist emergency procedures.

At the time, oil companies were smarting from criticism of windfall profits and accusations that they had fabricated the energy crisis.

Security men feared the backlash might lead to direct assaults on corporate officers.

The lucrative escapades of South American terrorists have made high-level executives inviting quarry. In a recent case, the Born Brothers, executives of Argentina's largest privately owned firm, were kidnapped from their limousine by left wing guerrillas. They were released a few weeks ago after a reported $60 million ransom was paid.

News of Bondurant's Corporate Driving Course travelled by word of mouth through boardrooms across the country.

To date, 27 drivers from U.S. Steel, Rockwell, Alcoa, Bechtel and four major oil companies (who insist on anonymity) have taken the $412, three-day course.

"The main concern of most of these drivers had been not spilling the boss's coffee, but it doesn't hurt them to know what to do in a tight situation," said Bondurant.

"I teach them everything I'd teach a pro — concerning techniques, weight transfer, feel of the car, and proper use of the steering wheel, brakes and throttle.

"When he's driving the chairman of the board around," he added, "he better know what he's doing."

To achieve maximum car control, trainees are subjected to a hair-raising regiment of power slides and 180-degree reverse turns on an oil-covered skid pad, followed by timed runs on a maze-like precision course and, finally, high speed chases both during the day and at night.

"Most people are only driving at four-tenths capacity," said course instructor Ron Southern, 28. "We want them to be able to drive at nine-tenths if they have too."

Outthinking the potential kidnapper is just as important as out-maneuvering him, according to Bondujant.

Trainees are taught to be alert and suspicious, to develop a sixth sense for danger.

Police of Seven Nations Hunt Icy-Cool, Real-Life 'Jackal'

PARIS (WP) — The current breed of international terrorist is not, for the most part, the stuff of which legends are fashioned. But, the improbable "Carlos" is clearly an exception.

In just a few weeks, he has become a household name here. He is touted as a globe-trotting, icy, cool assassin—a real-life "j a c k a l," matching the fictional character in the famous best-seller about an attempt to kill President Charles de Gaulle.

Some people suspect that Carlos may be something of a fictional character himself, but, there is no doubt that his exploits have enlivened a dull summer and kept French n e w s p a p e r circulations buoyant.

Carlos is the linchpin of a drama that began as a subdued counterespionage raid on a Left Bank apartment here in which two French agents and an informer were killed. He is allegedly the steel-nerved gunman who blasted his way out of the trap and then vanished, depsite efforts by the police of at least seven countries to find him. He has been reported seen in London, Brussels, Duesseldorf, tockholm and Beirut. Like all colorful villains, he has been running rings around the police.

Carlos is supposed to be carrying in his head the plans and code names of a far-flung terrorist operation that involves collaboration between Palestinian, Japanese, Turkish and Latin American extremist organizations, with links to West Germany's Baader-Meinhof gang.

Newspaper accounts here picture him as the chief of a band responsible for such terrorist sorties as last September's assault on the French embassy in the Netherlands by Japanese "Red Brigade" members and a misfired bazooka attack here eight months ago on an Israeli jumbo jet at Orly Airport.

A suitcase he reportedly left at a friend's house in London contained an impressive arsenal of guns, grenades and explosives—it was discovered when the explosives began leaking in the hot weather. It also held a notebook listing about 500 prominent persons w h i c h predictably, was dubbed Carlos' assassination list.

A number of mysteries surround the affair. Not the least is Carlos' real identity—as well as his genuine, as distinct from his suggested, importance.

According to a London newspaper quoting Scotland Yard sources, he is actually a 25-year-old Venezuelan with the unlikely name of Illitch Ramirez-Sanchez. His wealthy lawyer-father n a m e d him after Lenin. Illitch attended Patrice Lumumba University, Moscow's training academy for foreign Communists. Later he allegedly grew disillusioned with orthodox communism, and launched into terrorism on a global scale. Superintelligent and utterly ruthless, as all successful conspirators are, he did not take long to reach the top. Or so the story goes.

However, he has never been officially identified. Some skeptics here have asked why, if Illitch or Carlos was all that dangerous, did senior officers of France's counterespionage agency, the DST go unarmed to get him? French policemen of any description are not known for reluctance to carry guns.

And why, the skeptics ask, did they allow him to go unaccompanied to an adjoining room, from which he emerged with pistol blazing? Also, how was it that, for three years, he had ben able to travel freely among Paris, London and several other European cities reportedly on four different passports without eliciting suspicion until a Lebanese informer let his name drop.

Grafftey First Off Mark

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Heward Grafftey PC—Brome—Missisquoi will be first off the mark in the race to succeed Robert Stanfield as party leader.

Grafftey has called a Friday press conference to announce his candidacy.

A 13-year veteran of the Commons Grafftey has been campaigning for delegate support for several months.

Some time ago he said he would officially announce his candidacy when it was appropriate to do so.

Now that Stanfield has announced his decision, and the leadership convention has been set for Ottawa next Feb. 18-22, the time is appropriate.

Grafftey, 46, was first elected as the MP for Brome-Missisquoi in 1958 and has served ever since except for the 1968-72 term when he was defeated.

During the years he has become known as a consumer advocate. More recently he has been critical of government for listlessness in Canadian economic activity.

Although he is the first into the race Grafftey won't be alone for long, and the track is likely to be quite crowded before the convention starts.

Flora MacDonald, Kingston and the Islands; John Fraser, Vancouver South; Jack Horner, Crowfoot; Claude Wagner, Ste. Hyacinthe; Toronto mayor David Crombie; Ontario Premier William Davis; and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed have all been mentioned as possible candidates.

Civil Tongue In Civil Head

OTTAWA (CP) — Civil servants should keep a civil tongue in their heads when speaking of their political bosses, according to Prime Minister Trudeau.

Trudeau told the Commons Wednesday he approved the recent suspension by Supplies and services Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer of an employee who pulically criticized his department.

". . . it is not proper," he said, "for civil servants to criticize and make political statements against the government."

Arthur Stewart, president of the 8,000-member Supply and Services Union Public Service Alliance, was suspended late in June for three months because of a article attacking Goyer.

Opposition Gathering Steam In Fight Over Gasoline Tax

OTTAWA (CP) — The opposition continued to heap abuse on the government's new 10-cents-a-gallon increase in gasoline taxes Wednesday — and there is more to come.

"It (the attack) really hasn't been going on for very long," said Progressive Conservative whip Robert McKinley, adding that his party still has "a considerable number of speakers" on second reading of the bill.

Charles Caccia, deputy government whip, said the Liberals will stick with the proposed legislation as long as necessary to ensure passage.

There were indications, however, that the government is preparing to begin Parliament's summer recess next week.

It is understood that a motion to adjourn Friday, July 25, at least until September, will be on today's order paper.

Debate on the tax bill was held up again Wednesday because of another in a series of procedural wrangles that has interrupted progress so far. As a result, there were only five speakers before the House rose for the day.

The lone NDP member was John Rodriguez who represents the Northern Ontario riding of Nickel Belt, where the main industry is mining.

Rodriguez spent part of his time slamming the Conservatives for what he called their failure to heed the plight of working people.

"I have always suspected that there is no difference between federal Liberals and Tories. . . . It seems to me that only one class of persons benefits from their administration and that is the person who owns a corporation. Certainly the working class of this country does not benefit.

He challenged the sincerity of a statement by Conservative House Leader Walter Baker who said Conservative MPs are worried about the impact of the tax on working people.

Rodriguez's criticism of Baker, an Ottawa lawyer, brought swift reaction from the other Conservatives who spoke Wednesday — Ray Hnatyshyn, Saskatoon-Biggar, Perrin Beatty, Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo and Robert Muir, Cape Breton-The Sydneys.

HIGHWAY SLOWED

OTTAWA (CP) — The government plans to slow construction of the Mackenzie Highway in the Northwest Territories and transfer some of the funds to other projects, Northern Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said Wednesday.

He told Douglas Neil (PC-Moose Jaw), in the Commons that at least some of the money saved on the Mackenzie project will be spent on the Dempster and Carcross highways in the Yukon and the Liard Highway in the N.W.T.

A department spokesman said Buchanan still is waiting to hear from the treasury board how much of the money saved on the Mackenzie can be spent on the other highways.

The spokesman said work on the Mackenzie still will go ahead because the government has signed contracts.

Hearing Set On Housing For Seniors

Details of a $3-$5 million senior citizens housing project at Foul Bay and Cadboro Bay will be described at a public hearing set by Oak Bay council for July 24 at 5:15 p.m.

The project on more than four acres of land adjoining the Oak Bay recreation centre the Oak Bay recreation centre now in final construction, is a project of B.C. Baptist Federation designed for persons over 65 who meet requirements for subsidized housing.

Senior governments are sharing in the cost but administration will be left to the Baptist federation. The project will be open to applicants from the general public.

Oak Bay has given first readings to a bylaw enabling the developers to enter into a land use contract with the municipality to ensure control over the project.

Approximately 230 individual units are proposed in seven buildings that will have off-street parking and landscaping in the area bounded by Bowker Creek, Bee Street, Goldsmith and Foul Bay Road.

Lottery booth: a loser for looks

Museum 'Clutter' Disturbing Staff

Some members of the Provinical Museum staff are upset by the "clutter" gathering in and around the museum and the museum director is angry they have made it a public issue.

A statement on museum letterhead and signed "the British Columbia Provincial Museum staff" was mailed to the Times and decries "the carnival atmosphere" developing at the museum.

"It's an in-house matter and I have no comment on it," director Yorke Edwards snapped when asked about it today.

The statement says the museum is justly gaining a reputation throughout North America for its concepts and the quality in its planned and completed exhibits.

A capable staff of curators and technicians has been transformed into a team of professionals and "to surround these people and this institution with a carnival atmosphere is to downgrade both their efforts and the dignity of the museum," the statement says.

"Adjacent to the main entrance is a booth plastered with posters and pushing lottery tickets. Across from the director's office windows stands a portable stage that looks like the setting for a PNE sideshow rather than a symphony orchestra.

"Visitors can no longer lounge in the planter area without the guilt of having to purchase something," the statement says.

"A Coca-Cola machine abuts the Glass House near the breezeway in jarring contrast to the weathered Indian artifacts."

The statement says there have been suggestions that the people who created the exhibits within the museum should have a voice on use of the grounds.

It proposes that suggestion be carried one step further and they should be actively involved in proposals, planning and execution to bring the exterior of the museum up to the quality "that the thinking public expects of a provincial museum."

When a War of Long Ago Haunts a Happy Marriage

Sometimes I have this nightmare, see? I'm in the witness box of an enormous courtroom. The judge is bending down over me from about 40 feet up, a fierce, pink-faced man with a real crazy white wig.

I hear his question thundering and echoing. "What are the grounds for divorce, witness?" And then I can hear myself answering. My voice is a little tin flute. "Well, m'lord, my wife was a foreman in a war plant . . ."

Even awake I've been having some long, tortured thoughts about divorce and superior women, the Rosemary Browns of the world, and stuff like that since my wife and I started remodelling the upstairs.

If we'd just got those splendid chaps who did the downstairs, life would still be sweet. We might look forward to another 50 or 60 years of contented matrimony, teetering down life's highway, arm-in-arm and with a merry song on our lips. But, no. Let us finish the upstairs bedrooms ourselves, my wife said. Before I knew it I was up to my clavicle in 40,000 board feet of PV Woodgrain, or whatever it's called. And we were fighting like wild animals.

It is not only disgusting. It's downright dangerous. A man can take just so much and if, having taken so much, he happens to be holding in his hand a well-balanced claw-hammer the consequences are apt to be dire, not to mention homicidal.

That creeps into my nightmares, too. I hear myself saying, "I cannot tell a lie m'lord. I destoyed her with my little claw-hammer."

In some ways the situation parallels that of a couple we know who came to a legal parting of the ways for no other reason than that the wife was the intellectual superior of the husband — or, at least, fancied she was — and became incapable of letting him forget it for more than 11 seconds.

After 15-odd years of constant reminders that he was a bird-brain, the man suddenly went berserk, ran off with a cute little waitress with a high bosom and a low I.Q. and gives every appearance of living happily ever after. The new wife keeps saying, "You're so right, Daddy," and that brings the roses to his cheeks.

My wife and I pitied both the original wife and the husband in their conflict, little dreaming that our own fate might be determined in a similar way by finishing the upstairs bedrooms, a project that's brought togetherness to the point of the Indian death-lock.

Trouble is that my wife really was a foreman during the war or, at any rate a squad leader or a charge hand or some other unlikely position of command and authority.

At various times while I was overseas bringing down Adolf Hitler, quite a lot of it in the borough of Chelsea, and making the world safe for the Germans and Japanese, my wife was building ship's pantries and range-finders and echo-sounders and all sorts of other things. She even made stove-pipes, roof-jacks and air conditioning units which, for reasons that have persistently escaped me, had something to do with the war-effort. God knows how we'd have won without those roof-jacks, whatever they may be.

But I mustn't get bitter. It is just that when we go up those stairs for an evening of joinery it's as if the war has started up again.

She is like those types such as my friend Macpherson who managed to become sergeants during the last unpleasantness by some freak of chance, have never got over the taste of power and are always looking for a chance to bark out some word of command.

All I have to do is stand there with my little claw-hammer in my hand and my wife starts crisply issuing orders. Her whole past seems to rise up before her. She's incapable of not reverting to rank.

You wouldn't believe the scorn and contempt that greets my simple, basic approach to carpentry. My reliance, for example, on the adroit use of molding to cover up any slight mistake — I often use molding on molding and may, in fact, be a pioneer in this technique — drives her to a frenzy of authoritarianism.

No femme fatale could come between us, mind you. But an overlap of as little as two inches of PV Woodgrain, easily covered by the giant-sized molding I favor, is enough to cause her to launch into criticisms beyond the happiest marriage's point of no return. That is the point we're at now. The rest may be court history.

All Sooke All Set

Rolling, chopping and splicing toward Canadian championships, about 30 loggers will battle for prizes at this year's All-Sooke Day on Saturday.

Loggers will come from as far as New Zealand and Australia for contests including national finals in log-rolling, springboard chop and team loggers' relay of wood chopping and cable splicing.

After a 10 a.m. parade from the Sooke shopping plaza, a salmon and beef barbecue will start about noon at the Sooke flats, and children's events will follow.

The barbecue will feature 1,000 pounds of salmon and 500 pounds of beef, director Jack Keating said today.

All-Sooke Day began as a community picnic in 1933 when fish canners J. H. Todd and Son Ltd., operated the old fish traps in the area and a fish feast was a natural focus for the picnic, he added.

Aldermen Snub Rub Offer

But Yield to Knead for Massage Parlor

★ ★ ★

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

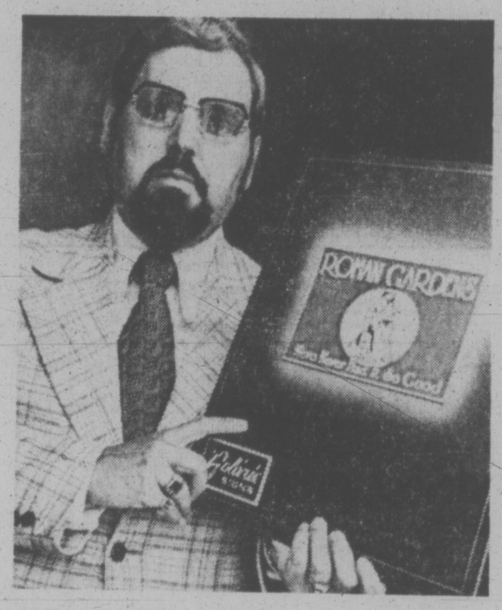
Richmond entrepreneur William Gold, who wants to offer Victoria's tired businessmen "relaxing body rubs," today kneaded city aldermen's opinion into a favorable recommendation for a trades licence.

But finance committee members politely declined Gold's invitation that they submit aldermanic limbs to the manipulations of his wife, who also attended the meeting.

When he said she would be "more than happy to demonstrate" her technique on the spot, aldermen looked at each other for a moment in some embarrassment.

Then committee chairman Ald. Sam Bawlf replied that he didn't consider that an appropriate place or time for a massage.

Of the four aldermen present — Mayor Peter Pollen didn't attend — only Ald. Clyde Savage was opposed to granting a trades licence for the proposed Victoria operation, which is to be called The Roman Gardens.



"MY GIRLS WEAR MORE than your wives would wear on the beach," William Gold told aldermen. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Savage said Gold seems "a nice enough chap," but if he were allowed to set up such an establishment other less reputable persons might follow suit and there would be the potential for "the types of things this city can do without."

He also criticized Gold for running a picture of a nude in a Georgia Straight advertisement for his Richmond leisure club.

"To advertise nude women and then say we don't have nude women is dishonest practice," he commented.

"Disappointing, do you mean," joked Ald. Bob Ellis.

When Ellis earlier questioned Gold about the ad., with its implications that body rubs were performed by nude or topless women, Gold replied that his "opposition" had resorted to similar advertising and he had to compete.

But he gave assurances that he was not interested in running "a house of ill repute," and produced letters from the Richmond health and licence inspectors indicating there had been no complaints or problems in that municipality.

"To quote the Richmond Review, there is no hanky-panky going on because it can't — the walls are paper-thin" and stop two feet short of the ceiling, he said.

As for dress, Gold assured the aldermen that "my girls wear more than your wives would wear on the beach." Originally they were clad in harem-type costumes but now they are dressed in "hostess gowns," he explained.

City manager Jim Bramley said a message to the committee from Ald. Bill Tindall indicated that B.C.'s massage parlors were the subject of a report to the attorney-general's department by the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit.

Notwithstanding that, Ellis moved the application for the licence be approved "in the absence of any information of illegal conduct."

Ald. Malcolm Anderson also favored approval, saying it wasn't up to city council to "police the morals of the community," while Bawlf said he didn't consider the city had sufficient grounds to refuse a licence in this case.

But Bawlf said it should be a matter for public concern that various undesirable activities can be pursued in B.C. outside of the legislation governing massage practitioners.

Hopefully the report to the attorney-general would result in tighter legislation regulating such activities, he said.

A letter to the committee from local massage practitioner Gibson Brown complained that the "so-called body rub places" hurt the reputation of legitimate practitioners, by creating such a bad image that respectable people shun the entire field.

"I often get phone calls from men who are from out of town (usually Toronto) wanting to get a massage," Brown stated. "When they find I have no girls to do it they suddenly become not interested."

Tourists Are Pinching Pennies

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria's tourist flow is higher this summer than last year — but visitors are spending less.

Don Nixon, manager of the Visitor Information Centre, said the recession has made tourists more careful in their spending patterns.

"They seem to be spending the absolute minimum. They need a bed and a meal but after that they are being very careful. They are buying fewer gifts and other retail goods and going to fewer attractions. They also seem to be going for lower-priced meals."

As a result, the total tourist spending in the Victoria area will probably just match the $137 million spent here last year, despite the higher number of visitors in 1975.

The flow of visitors arriving on B.C. ferries is up 5 per cent from last year. Traffic on the Marguerite is up in July after a slow start in June.

Last year the Marguerite brought in an average of 1,000 visitors a day during July but this July is running at about 1,100 per day, up 10 per cent. For example, there were 1,175 on Wednesday, 1,051 on Tuesday and last Saturday there were 1,458. Total passenger capacity is 2,000.

Most of the passengers appear to be over just for the day although some are using the five-day excursion rate.

The hotels and motels report a mixed trend. Some have a higher occupancy rate than last year while others are down and there is no clear geographic pattern. Most, however, are satisfied with the flow of tourists so far this season.

Some visitors have commented that hotel and motel rates are higher than in some cities south of the border, particularly in Washington and Oregon.

Nixon said Victoria hotel men are aware of this problem but feel they must charge fairly high rates because of the short tourist season here.

"If we had a well-developed convention business to attract visitors in the off-season the rates in Victoria might be more competitive."

Merchants have noticed a shift in the travel routes of tourists, partly as a result of the disruption of Government Street. Some tourists arriving on Vancouver Island by car might not be going all the way downtown to the Causeway as a result of the detours.

The downtown Causeway bureau of the Visitor Information Centre is handling tourist inquiries at the rate of about 500 per day. In addition, several hundred wander in to obtain information on a self-service basis but the bureau does not keep records on the number.

The satellite tourist booth beside the old firehall at Burnside and Douglas is handling between 100 and 200 inquiries per day from tourists.

Ask The Times

Q. My husband and I had to feel sorry for the lieutenant-governor and his wife, having to shake hands with so many people at the Government House garden party each year. My husband says the late President Kennedy has the record for hand-shaking because he was so popular. Is he right? I've bet him he's wrong. P.D.

A. You win the bet although your husband is partially right. It is an American president that set the record. President Theodore Roosevelt shook hands with 8,513 people at a New Year's Day White House presentation in 1907—a feat that's yet to be equalled.

Food Co-op Prepares to Open

Victoria's first storefront co-operative food outlet should be open in a month in the old Purity store at Fernwood and Gladstone.

The vacant building at 2009 Fernwood has been leased by Springridge Housing Co-op whose members are among organizers of the food co-op which has not yet been named.

Food will be sold from the front of the building, said one organizer Kathleen Orton.

A first public meeting last week attracted 131, and a second meeting of organizers was held Wednesday night.

Customers will have to be members of the co-op and will be asked to work at the store on a voluntary basis.

Food will be purchased wholesale and a flat 10 per cent added to prices to cover building rental and other bills, she said.

She has been involved in other food co-ops and says members will probably save 20 per cent.

Potential members who attended the meeting included a cross-section of the community, said Fernwood Community Association worker Brian Lewis.

"There wasn't a predominance of freaks. There were young people, older people, men, women, Indians and whites," he said.

Victoria's only existing food co-op, Amor de Cosmos does not sell goods straight from the shelf but requires advance orders on food items which are picked up later.

DETRAINING for the last time as conductor of the E and N Railway run from Parksville to Victoria is Ab Stenberg who retires today after 42 years with the railway. Born in Victoria, Stenberg started off in the train service department in 193[illegible] and has been travelling the Island by train ever since. He lives with wife Betty at 1127 McKenzie. High Optimism Indicated By New Company Starts

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Business optimism continues to be high in British Columbia despite the recession, according to the number of companies starting in this province during the first half of the year.

Statistics released today by the office of the registrar of companies shows 1975 totals close to 1974 figures, despite the business downturn.

The numbers of companies starting up in B.C. or coming into the province is considered a major index of business optimism.

During the first six months 279 companies registered to do business in B.C., up slightly from 266 in the same period of 1974. The number of companies coming into the province had declined after the election of a New Democratic Party government but in 1975, apparently, the trend his been reversed.

Meanwhile, the number of companies incorporating in B.C. totalled 5,297 so far this year, down slightly from 5,544 during the first half of 1974, a boom period for the province. Most of these companies are quite small, including large numbers of penny mining companies and small corner businesses. There has been a decline in the number of mining companies being formed but most of the drop has been covered by an increase in the number of other types of businesses starting up in the province.

During the first six months there were 382 societies formed in B.C., up from 356, along with 30 new co-ops, down from 45.

ures in brackets) were January 55 (60), Feburary 36 (38) and March 28 (40).

The picture improved in April with 64 companies coming into B.C. (up from 42). There were 36 in May (down from 54) but the total rose to 60 in June (up from 32).

For companies incorporating in B.C., there was an identical pattern, with totals below 1974 levels in the first quarter and ahead of last year in the second quarter, except for May.

In general, the optimism is evident in the second quarter of this year, after a slow start.

During the first three months, the number of companies coming into B.C. had been running behind last year's levels. The month-by-month totals (with 1974 figures in brackets) were January 758 (845), February 756 (822), March 788 (949).

Second quarter totals; April 1,007 (935), May 1,001 (1,092) and June 987 (901).

Generally speaking, the companies being incorporated are quite small, while the companies being registered in B.C. are large. These are companies with headquarters in other provinces or countries.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Sixteen Crown witnesses waited in Victoria provincial court all morning Wednesday for a man charged with armed robbery to appear.

But, William Harold Mack, the accused, was still in the B.C. Penitentiary at New Westminster.

Mack was scheduled for a two-day hearing starting Wednesday but administrative red tape delayed his arrival at court until the afternoon.

The case was adjourned to July 23 for election and plea at the request of Mack's lawyer, Dean Wilson, who said he planned to apply to the B.C. Supreme Court to have all proceedings against Mack declared a nullity.

Fifteen court days from Oct. 21 to Dec. 1 were set aside for the trials of 33 members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada who pleaded not guilty to unlawfully participating in a strike Dec. 19, 1974.

Twenty-eight of the members had been charged June 25 to 27 under the Public Service Staff Relations Act. The remaining five were charged Wednesday.

Another 25 are scheduled to enter their pleas today and Friday.

James Archie Hancock, 33, was committed for higher court trial after a two-day preliminary hearing on an extortion charge.

He is accused of attempting to extort $100,000 from manager Vincent Fourt of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at 1624 Hillside on March 27.

Hancock and Gilles Paul Proulx must return to court next week for trial on a two-count joint charge of conspiracy to commit armed robbery.

Bail was set at $2,000 with one or two sureties for Richard Thomas Attwood, 22, of 735 Belton.

Attwood was charged Tuesday with possession of marijuana and hashish for the purpose of trafficking and possession of cocaine.

"It is unfortunate this man has persisted in criminal and dishonest conduct in the past few years," said Ostler, who sentenced 23-year-old Leon Paul Pageau, of Montreal, to one year.

Pageau pleaded guilty to six counts of uttering forged documents.

Lang said Pageau stole a book of 'travellers' cheques from a resident at the Coolaid hostel Monday, and cashed six of the cheques that same day, receiving $300. Lang added that Pageau had a record of related offences dating back to 1969 and has spent almost three of the last six years in Quebec prisons.

Paul Edward Cianflone, 30, a recent arrival in Victoria, was sentenced by Ostler to 14 days in jail after Dr. John Evans found Cianflone "frustrated, but of no mental disorder."

Cianflone had pleaded guilty Monday to mischief and wilful damage. He did about $205 damage Saturday by breaking two windows in fits of anger. Ostler said Cianflone's record included three previous similar convictions.

★ ★ ★

★ ★ ★

Fines totalling $525 were levied on three people who pleaded guilty to separate charges of possession of marijuana.

Dale Arthur Doney, 19, of Mill Bay, was fined $300. It was his second conviction on a marijuana charge.

Douglas Randall Wells, 19, of 644 Ralph, was fined $150. Police had found Wells cultivating two marijuana plants July 10 on vacant property behind 642 Canterbury.

Sandra Schultz, 28, of Nanaimo was fined $75.

The prosecutor said police were alerted by an officer at William Head prison after Mrs. Schultz visited someone there. He said police followed a camper truck in which Mrs. Schultz was a passenger and saw her throw three marijuana cigarettes out a window.

★ ★ ★

Seventeen-year-old Timothy Combe, 959 Balmoral, was sentenced by Judge Douglas Campbell to nine months in jail, to be followed by six months' probation.

Combe had pleaded guilty June 3 to two counts of breaking and entering and theft at two Oak Bay homes May 19 and 25.

Combe was also sentenced on three other counts — theft of a $2,195 car from Empress Pontiac Buick, 2865 Douglas, May 25, mischief by driving the car through a padlocked link chain gate at the car lot, and possession of stolen property.

Mayor Lum Shoots Off

Saanich Mayor Ed Lum will add another string to his bow when he shoots the first arrow at opening ceremonies of the Pacific Northwest Archery Association championships 9 a.m. Saturday in Lambrick Park.

Music will be provided by the composite band of naval reservists, here from across Canada to attend a summer training program at Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt.

Kindergarten Permission Granted

Permission to use its premises for a kindergarten has been granted Emmanuel Baptist Church, 2121 Cedar Hill Cross Road, in an amendment to Oak Bay zoning bylaws.

Council also has approved the removal of kindergarten zoning for property occupied by St. Philips Church, 2928 Eastdowne, which no longer uses the church for that purpose.

Amendments followed a public hearing Monday in which no submissions were offered to the municipal council.

Seafront Purchase

NANAIMO — The province is purchasing seafront property at Piper's Lagoon north of Nanaimo, Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said Wednesday.

Cost of the land to be used as outdoor recreational area is $345,000.

Owner of the lagoon spit and headland property is Morningside Beach Properties Ltd. Deane Finlayson, one of the principals of Morningside, declined comment on the negotiations.

The deal entails a swap of non-waterfront Crown land nearby.

Solidarity Picket Slated

A "solidarity picket" will be held outside the legislative buildings Monday morning by striking Insurance Corporation of B.C. employees, bolstered by members of other Victoria area unions. (See also page 40.)

Victoria Labor council delegates voted Wednesday to support the picket planned by members of the Office and Technical Employees Union, on strike against ICBC since May 20.

The demonstration will be held from 8 a.m. to 9:30 a.m.

An OTEU representative told delegates at the labor council meeting that four Victoria adjusting firms were still handling ICBC work, and were considered strike-breakers. He said the four are Coast Claims, Brouwer and Co., Kernaghan Adjusters Ltd., and Palmer-Seedhouse Adjusters.

The spokesman also said two Victoria area body shops were co-operating with the corporation by only charging customer the deductible portion of car repairs. The two are Fred's Auto Paint Specialty and Cunningham's Car Painting, he said.

The labor council also endorsed a boycott of the Towne Cinema in Victoria and urged union members not to patronize the non-union theatre.

An informational picket line will be set up outside the theatre on July 27 by the B.C. projectionists' union.

Moonlighting Teachers Hit

Moonlighting teachers employed as summer help at Vancouver Island Coach Lines raised the hackles of Victoria Labor Council delegates Wednesday.

"Teachers are well looked after in terms of annual salaries while others such as students and the unemployed have no work at all," council secretary Larry Ryan said.

Delegates voted to write to the manager of VLC and to the provincial government's director of transit Vic Parker urging that the practice of hiring teachers as summer help be reconsidere.d

But although there are still about nine teachers employed this summer at the bus line, the hiring of additional teachers has apparently already been stopped.

Ralph Davies, a Coach Lines driver and member of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers Union, told the delegates that as the teachers quit their summer employment, people other than teachers are hired to take their place.

Davis said the practice of hiring teachers started years ago when the bus line couldn't get any other summer reinforcements to deal with the increased tourist trade.

"When we couldn't get anybody else we branched out into the teacher element. They are moonlighters and we shouldn't be condoning this, but the question of human rights comes into this — we used these people summer after summer when we needed them. We used them when we couldn't get anyone else and when our own employees didn't want to work overtime," Davies said.

TUBBERS BRACED

NANAIMO — Close to 250 bathtubs will race from Nanaimo to Vancouver Sunday in the ninth annual race that draws competitors from all over the world.

Advance registration has put this year's entry total ahead of last year's to date. Entries in 1974 numbered 247. Names have already been received from Australia, the United States, Mexico and eastern Canada, said bathtub society bursar Sylvia Koster.

Race safety meetings are now being held to cut dangers to a minimum. Race time July 20 is 10 a.m.

TOP PICK IN FOLD

Hydro-Line Session

DUNCAN — First in a series of public meetings will be held tonight at 8 in Bench school five miles south of Cowichan Bay for discussion of B.C. Hydro's two proposed 500,000-volt line transmission corridor on Vancouver Island.

The meetings will mark the re-opening of the issue which came to attention in meetings held November, 1973, and has since undergone environmental impact studies.

Power needs for the island would be satisfied until the year 2000 if the project goes through, B.C. Hydro has said. A clearing strip for power lines would stretch for 90 miles between Victoria and Qualicum.

An existing 138,000-volt line on the east coast would still be used but would eventually serve only smaller communities.

The new route suggested by environmental consultants Howard Paish and Associates would pass almost wholly through crown land. Consultants studied the project's probable impact on plant and animal life in the areas.

Mel's Taking No Chances: He'll Be Fit for Flyers

With Mel Bridgman due to report to the Philadelphia Flyers' training camp in mid-September, one thing is certain. The No. 1 draft pick of last year's junior crop of hockey players plans to be in the best possible condition for his first year in the National Hockey League.

Leading scorer in the Western Canada Junior Hockey League last season as a member of the Victoria Cougars, with 66 goals and 91 assists, Bridgman already has started on his get-fit and keep-fit campaign

He is working out daily in the weight-room at the University of Victoria on a controlled program that also includes running four times a week at two to three miles a day. "I would like to get my weight up to about 190 pounds," he said. "I weigh 187 now compared to my playing weight last season of about 182. I work an hour and a half on the weights and my running is just to get my wind. I'm pretty slow really. When I was in Philadelphia the only advice they gave me was 'come in good shape' and I certainly plan to be ready when the training camp opens."

"It was quite a thrill to be selected first", Bridgman said, and "if I wasn't quite sure before the draft at least I thought I might be first from the Western Canada League."

Deal Made Before Draft

And he shot down a couple of rumors that were prevalent at the time he was selected by the Flyers. "We made the deal the night before the draft," he admitted, the "we" including his agent, Frank Milne of St. Catharines. "I was told not to say anything, so naturally I got quite a kick out of the story in the Toronto paper saying 'I was being difficult in negotiations with the Flyers'."

As it was, it was on the morning of the draft the Flyers traded Bill Clement, Richmond defenceman Don McLean, and a top draft pick to Washington for the right to Washington's first-round pick. One hour later they picked Bridgman. General manager Keith Allen said at the time: "Our scouts were unanimous when I asked which player they would choose. They all said Bridgman. The computer also came up with Bridgman as No. 1."

So all Mel has to do now is earn a place as a centre with the Flyers. And with Bobby Clarke and Rick MacLeish fairly well established, the men he has to beat out, eventually, if not sooner, are Orest Kindrachuk and Terry Crisp. "I feel I have a good chance," he said.

For Bridgman, his hockey career started when he was about seven in Thunder Bay, and in Victoria it had its beginning at the Racquet Club in the 1969-70 season in the bantam league. "I guess we weren't much of a success then," he recalled. "We used to lose something like 21-1 and 19-0."

Thanks to Al and Archie

The following year it was a jump up to midgets and two coaches "who did a lot for me," Al Forbes and Archie Courthall, "although we lost the playoff to Rick LaPointe and his Esquimalt team." Then it was the Victoria Cubs, Nanaimo and in 1973 a Molson hockey scholarship.

"I used up some of it at University," he said. "And took a couple of courses, because of playing wth the Cougars, I couldn't take a full load. Last year I went to summer school and the Cougars took care of that."

Later this month, Bridgman will instruct at the Juan de Fuca Hockey School for two weeks and then do likewise at the Racquet Club in late August. "I like to go back there, because they helped me so much," he said. Then on Sept. 12 he reports to Philly, "although I may go a few days early."

"Some other coaches were ready to give up on me," he said. "But Paddy, when he came here, was just tremendous. He gets you believing in yourself and gives you all that confidence that you need."

'I'll Be the First to Know'

He also praised his two linemates, Peter Morris and Danny Lucas. "We weren't that disciplined as a line," he explained, "but we seemed to know what the other fellow was doing and it just worked out."

And no he isn't fearful of being tested in the NHL. "I'll have some big friends," he quipped. "They tell me the Flyers are just like one big, happy family and have a lot of team spirit."

"I like to think, too, they're counting on me to stay with the Flyers this season; but if I'm not ready to stick in the NHL, I'll be the first to know, and I wouldn't mind going down to Richmond, rather than sitting on the bench."

As to salary, Bridgman's has not been disclosed and he prefers to keep it that way. "But it's a multi-year pact," he admitted, "and no, it's not the six-figure a year bracket. Not quite."

With that it was back to business in the weight room. After all, it was still morning, training time. "I usually go to the beach in the afternoon," he laughed. "When they told me to come in shape, they also said don't overdo it. It's a long season."

His deep tan told the rest of the story.

Mercer's Timing Wrong for Irish

By D'ARCY KAVANAGH
Times Staff

Bill Mercer proved Wednesday night at Memorial Arena that he possesses a great sense of timing.

Mercer made a hero of himself by scoring the only two goals in overtime to give Vancouver Burrards an exciting 12-10 win over Victoria Shamrocks before 1,610 fans.

The win not only ruined the Shamrocks' eight-game unbeaten streak at home but moved the Burrards four points ahead of the Shamrocks in the race for second place in the Western Lacrosse Association.

However, Victoria has played four fewer games and gets a chance to close the gap tonight in New Westminster in a contest against the first place Salmonbellies.

Until the overtime, Mercer had done little to help his club. He had just one assist for the first 60 minutes as the Burrards survived mainly on the offensive play of veteran Bob Salt and rookie Ron Pinder.

And he might never have had the chance to play the hero if Ranjit Dillon had scored on his breakaway with 10 seconds left in the third period.

The veteran Victoria captain missed his chance to keep the Shamrocks' win streak alive when he beat Vancouver goalie Don Hamilton but hit the crossbar.

It wasn't an unproductive night, though, for Dillon. In a scoring slump the last two weeks, he had two goals and two assists against the Burrards.

Both his goals came in the initial period with his first marker a shorthanded effort that cut the Burrards' lead to 2-1 and ignited a previously lethargic Victoria attack.

He couldn't help much in the second period as the Burrards stifled the Shamrocks offence and capitalized on weak netminding by George Grover to take a 9-5 lead into the third period.

If the second period belonged to Vancouver, the third was certainly Victoria's as the Irish outscored their opposition 5-1 to force the first overtime WLA contest this season at Memorial Arena.

Pinder, second in the WLA scoring race behind New Westminster's Wayne Goss, led the Burrards with four goals and two assists. Mercer and Bill Rawson each had two goals, while Salt had one goal and six assists.

Besides Dillon, the Shamrocks got two goals apiece from Jeevan Dillon and Charn Dhillon, who also had three assists.

League commissioner Colin Cruickshank was at the game and announced at a press conference between the first and second periods that the WLA is hopeful of holding an all-star game Aug. 6 at Memorial Arena.

"However, we have not finalized it yet," he said.

Victoria coach Archie Browning said he is against the game because it is too close to the playoffs and he doesn't want to risk injury to any of his players.

A decision on the game between Island and mainland all-stars will come after Cruickshank meets with Shamrocks president Ray Farmer, presently in Saskatoon.

Should the league decide to change the site of the contest, Cruickshank said the game will take place in Nanaimo at a yet unspecified time.

All proceeds of the events, he added, will go to aid Don Stephenson of Nanaimo and Gibby Jacobs of Coquitlam, both of whom have lost job pay because of playing injuries that have kept them out of work.

Eskimos Complete Perfect Campaign

By The Canadian Press

Edmonton Eskimos completed their Canadian Football League pre-season schedule with a perfect record Wednesday night, winning their fourth game 28-27 over Calgary Stampeders.

The Eskimos' 4-0 record stands out in marked contrast to those of others clubs, although British Columbia Lions could come close if they win in the final exhibition game tonight against Winnipeg Blue Bombers. The Lions have two wins, no losses and one tie.

Wednesday's other game saw Hamilton Tiger-Cats score their first victory by a 21-19 margin over Ottawa Roughriders.

Calgary and Toronto finished the exhibition schedule with 2-2 records while Ottawa, Hamilton and Saskatchewan Roughriders were 1-3. Winnipeg, with the one game remaining tonight at Vancouver, is 1-2.

Veteran quarterback Tom Wilkinson again displayed his ability to rally the Eskimos when he erased a 13-point Stampeders lead with two touchdown drives in the final two minutes at Calgary.

Wilkinson threw six yards to George McGowan and four yards to Tyrone Walls for the final two touchdowns. Dave Cutler kicked his fourth convert of the game for the winning point.

Bruce Lemmerman started at quarterback for Eskimos and threw 12 yards to McGowan for one touchdown and then combined with Larry Mayer for a 76-yard pass-and-run touchdown play.

Running back Willie Burden made runs of 12 and eight yards within a minute for the first two Calgary touchdowns and Tom Forzani scored six points on a 34-yard pass from Joe Pisarcik. Cyril McFall kicked two converts, a single and field goals from 37 and 32 yards.

At Montreal, the Argonauts completed their 11th consecutive quarter of play without a touchdown. Their last touchdown came in the first quarter of their second game against Winnipeg and they were shut out in the third game against B.C. Kicker Zenon Andrusyshyn, with two 31-yard field goals and a single in the second quarter, accounted for all the Toronto scoring against the Als.

Larry Smith scored for Montreal on a 22-yard run in the first quarter and Johnny Rodgers on an eight-yard plunge in the fourth.

Don Sweet and John Archbold each scored a convert and a field goal for the Als. Sweet's field goal was good from 16 yards in the third quarter and Archbold made his from 45 in the final quarter.

Hamilton's other touchdown came on a 32-yard run by Jim Datrice. Ian Sunter added field goals from 40 and 22 yards and kicked two converts and a single.

Ottawa's Peter Crepin provided one of the most exciting plays of the game when he intercepted a McMillan pass and returned it 95 yards for the Riders' first touchdown.

Rhome Nixon hauled in an 11-yard pass from Condredge Holloway for the other Ottawa touchdown while Gerry Organ booted a 23-yard field goal, two converts and a single and punter Dick Adams kicked a single.

B.C. Title Won By Gordon Head

DAWSON CREEK — Diane Mallory's ninth-inning, bases-loaded single lifted Gordon Head to a 7-6 win over Dawson Creek and the first girls' B.C. Little League softball championship Wednesday.

Sandra Martin picked up the victory as Gordon Head recovered from a 6-0 deficit to beat Dawson Creek and capture the best-of-five series for Division I (12-year-olds) three games to one.

Dawson Creek took the opening game 13-8 but Gordon Head won the second 6-1 and the third 6-5.

The Division II (13-15-year-olds) was postponed by rain and was played this morning. Dawson Creek holds a 2-1 lead over Gordon Head in the best-of-five series.

Triangle Squad Bounces Layritz

Triangle edged Layritz 8-6 Wednesday to remain alive in the District Little League all-star baseball tournament at Lampson Street Park.

The win kept Triangle alive in the losers' bracket of the six-team, double-knockout tournament but eliminated Layritz.

Mike Jongerhuis was the winning pitcher as he didn't allow a run in three and two-third innings of relief.

He came into the game in the third inning with one out, a runner on second base and Layritz leading 6-3. He struck out the next two batters to finish the inning and allowed only two other baserunners, one on an error and the other on a walk, the rest of the game.

Jongerhuis helped himself with a two-run single in the fifth inning to cut Layritz' lead to 6-5. Triangle took over the lead in the sixth with three runs.

Wayne English sparked the Layritz offence with a three-run double in the third inning.

Drew Porter allowed only one hit in the four innings to pick up the pitching victory and Randy Wickware helped the offence with a grand-slam homer in the fourth inning.

Walton Faces Assault Charge

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Mike Walton of Minnesota Fighting Saints of the World Hockey Association has surrendered to authorities on charges that he struck a hockey fan with his stick last February.

Walton pleaded not guilty Wednesday in municipal court to a charge of assault against Perry Crush of Poway, Calif. He was booked at San Diego County jail and released on his own recognizance.

A preliminary hearing was set for Aug. 6.

DHs SHOW INCREASE IN POWER PRODUCTION

NEW YORK (AP) — Led by Detroit Tiger strongman Willie Horton, the designated hitters in the American League this season are ahead of last year's power production.

The American League's DHs have already hit 127 home runs at the all-star break, 16 by Horton, compared to 167 all of last year. The production is up 41 per cent.

There are increases in almost every offensive category among DHs, including 17 per cent in RBI (561) and 13 per cent in runs (521).

The DHs are getting even greater respect from AL pitchers, as shown by a nine per cent rise in walks (432). And once they get on base, they are a bigger threat to run than last year — they are running at a 10 per cent better pace than last season with 64 stolen bases.

The cumulative batting average is .257, compared to .256 last season.

Forbes' Case Now in Hands of Jury

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — A jury of seven men and five women begin deliberations today on the question of whether a professional hockey player is bound by civil laws in a sport that encourages violence.

The player in question is Dave Forbes, a left winger for the National Hockey League Boston Bruins. He testified in his own behalf Wednesday, denying that he had used his stick to injure Henry Boucha of Minnesota North Stars last Jan. 4.

The 26-year-old Forbes said he was probably holding his stick as he skated toward Boucha, intent on settling the score for an earlier "sucker punch."

But Forbes denied any intent to use the stick as a weapon and denied using the butt end as a spear, causing a serious eye injury to Boucha.

The defence rested after Forbes' testimony.

He is the first professional athlete to face criminal charges in the United States from an incident occurring during a sports contest.

Forbes was charged with aggravated assault with a dangerous weapon. The alleged weapon, his hockey stick, was the focal point of Wednesday's testimony.

At one point, Forbes demonstrated for the jury how he had skated out of the penalty box, trailing the stick behind him, with the butt end probably exposed four to five inches.

The two players had clashed earlier when both went into a corner for the puck. Forbes admitted landing an elbow on Boucha and crunching the North Star forward into the boards.

Then, Forbes said, Boucha landed a "sucker punch," a blow from behind.

Forbes conceded that he fumed over the incident, screamed at Boucha in the penalty box and tried to think of ways to "even the score."

Forbes said fighting is part of the game, taught to players at an early age.

"That's probably one of the first things that we are taught, that we must fight back and that it's part of the game".

Forbes said an unusual placement of penalty boxes and player benches at Metropolitan Sports Centre, home of the North Stars, means opposing players completing a simultaneous penalty must inevitably meet by crossing the ice.

It was there that the fight occurred, with Boucha later going to hospital still complaining of double vision.

"I would guess I would have had the hockey stick in my hand at that moment."

When asked if he used the stick as a weapon, Forbes replied "no".

On cross-examination, Forbes conceded he may have felt embarrassed by being dumped to the ice at the hands of Boucha, since the game was being televised to the Boston area.

He conceded planning to get in the first blow and didn't first drop his gloves, one of the usual pre-fight moves in hockey.

'Old Crocks' Are First But Pros Right Behind

THE TENNIS SCENE

By Max Low

Players and fans alike are in for a real feast of tennis here on Vancouver Island in the next two or three weeks.

Biggest attraction for the fans should be the debut here of World Team Tennis on Thursday, July 24, when Hawaii Leiis meet Los Angeles Strings at Memorial Arena at 8 p.m.

The match will be a return one for the clubs which clash in Hawaii three days earlier when Leiis' star John Newcombe is expected to rejoin the Hawaii team after recovering from the leg injury which kept him out of this year's Wimbledon championships.

Victoria promoter Edgar Rhomberg said today it has been confirmed that Newcombe will play here. Others on the Hawaii team include Owen Davidson and Margaret Court. Los Angeles has Bob Lutz, Jeff Masters, Ross Case and playing-coach Rosemary Casals.

The following Monday (July 28) Hawaii tackles Cleveland, which is headed by Marty Reissen, and on Tuesday, July 29, the Leiis meet San Diego, which stars Dennis Ralston, Leslie Hunt and India's Amritraj brothers. Both of those matches are also at Memorial Arena.

From July 28 to Aug. 3, the 78th B.C. Open — now part of the prestige seven-city Western Satellite Circuit — will be staged at the Racquet Club of Victoria and will bring before fans here some of the finest young college players from the United States as well as many stars from other countries.

And, for us oldsters among the playing fraternity, this weekend the popular "Old Crocks" or "Geritol Classic" (take your pick) tourney will be played at the South Cowichan Lawn Tennis Club.

Organizer Gino Volgarino reports a record entry and says the grass courts are in "fine shape." The tournament gets under way at 5 p.m. Friday with mixed doubles matches and all couples must report to the starter's desk by then.

Taylor, who was in three finals but came away with only one title, hurt his shoulder in a warmup for a doubles semi-final the night before.

In the singles final, he served soft ones, had a lot of trouble getting the ball in and the result was much of the excitement was missing from what should have been a fine match.

Opponent Neil Coutts, normally a strong server and powerful hitter, became to cautious with Taylor's slow-balling and in all there were 12 service breaks (four in each set) as Taylor won 6-4, 5-7, 6-2.

Understand our Victoria Times tennis girls were quite a hit out at Western Speedway last Saturday night.

Linda Weech, Penny Murray, Cindy Majocha and Wendy La Fave served as pit crew for sports director Charlie Underwood in the CKDA Radio's International Disc Jockey motorcycle race.

The four girls are semi-finalists in the under-18 singles in the Second Annual Times Public Parks Tennis Tournament.

Talking of the Times tourney, don't forget that 5 p.m. next Monday is the deadline for all third-round matches to be played and the result is the deadline for all third-round matches to be played and the result cards back into the Times.

Get moving — there are a lot of results still to come!

CHANGING plans again is Victoria and B.C. women's golf champion Dorothy De Girolamo. She missed selection to provincial team by two strokes, was named an alternate and, after winning B.C. title, was offered travel fare to Canadian championships in Halifax next month. City champ had to decline trip this week because free air fare would jeopardize her amateur status.

Medallists Win

RICHMOND, (CP)— Medallists Linda Bellar and Mike Gove, both of the Seattle area, advanced Wednesday toward the finals of the Pacific Northwest Golf Association championships.

Bellar made it to the semi-finals at Richmond Country Club with three B.C. players by scoring a 2 and 1 victory over Liz Culver of Seattle.

The 18-year-old Gove overwhelmed John Hardyment of Vancouver 7 and 6 in the first round of the men's championship match play at Quilchena. Gove, who led all the qualifiers with rounds of 68 and 71, won the first seven holes against Hardyment.

Bellar's opponent in Thursday's semi-final will be 20-year-old Lorna McPherson, the upstart from Vancouver Point Grey who Wednesday won one-up over Patty Schram of Portland.

Palmer was an easy 4 and 2 victor Wednesday over Charlette Plank of Portland. McFall advanced by defeating Paula Phillips of Vancouver 3 and 2.

At the Quilchena course, defending champion Ed Jonson of Seattle had to beat off Gerry Kitson of the host club for a 2 and 1 triumph.

Jonson's brother, George, also won — 5 and 4 over Jim Kearns of Port Townsend, Wash.—setting up the possibility of a family match in today's third round.

Harris Sparks Mike's

Bob Harris put on an impressive two-way show Wednesday while sparking Mike's Sports Shop to a 3-0 victory over Sooke Merchants in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game at Sooke.

Another scheduled game, between Tony's Holdings and Ingraham Hotel at Central Park, was postponed because of wet grounds.

Harris put together a six hitter for the pitching victory and bashed out a solo home run in the fourth inning to aid the offence.

At Sanscha Park, Victoria Bates of the Pacific Coast League blanked Sidney All Stars 60 in an exhibition game.

Clay Allinottse struck out 12 Sidney batters before being replaced by Dave Ruthowsky in the sixth inning. Ruthowsky finished up with five strike outs against seven batters and allowed the only Sidney hit — a single by Perry Eitler in the seventh inning.

Bob Burrows connected for a three-run homer for Bates in the sixth inning and Pete Songhurst bashed out a solo blast in the fourth frame.

Bates play host to North Vancouver Roadhouse Inn Vikings in twin league doubleheaders this weekend at Royal Athletic Park.

Game times Saturday are 7 and 9 p.m. and the two teams clash again Sunday at 1 and 3 p.m.

In Victoria Senior Women's League games at Hyacinth Park, Hygrade Radio moved into a tie for third place with Esquimalt Combos by hammering MacDonalds Furniture 14-3 while Stockers North Americans edged closer to leading CJVI Vicettes with a 19-10 decision over Y-Not Holdings.

Lorna McHattie and Lyn Dupuis paced the Stocker attack with three hits each.

Carl Reid's two-hit pitching led Century Inn to a 3-1 victory over London Boxing club in one of the three Commercial Men's League games at Macdonald Park. In other games, James Bay Athletic Association blanked Butler Brothers 10-9 and Oak Bay Plumbing topped Trafalgar Legion, 6-5.

Russ Mosher used his arm and bat to give Carnarvon a 9-1 win over Triangle in the opening game of the annual Carnarvon "rookie" baseball tournament Wednesday at Carnarvon Park.

Mosher picked up the win by allowing only two hits and helped his cause by driving in three runs on three hits.

The six-team, double-knockout tournament for 13-year-olds continues today with West Vancouver meeting Layritz at 2:30 p.m. and Carnarvon taking on Burien, Wash., at 6:15 p.m.

Sydney Spells It Out

FEDERAL WAY, Wash.— With spectacular display of golfing "overkill", Sydney Thomson of Victoria served notice Wednesday that she intends to keep the Pacific Northwest Golf Association junior women's championship.

Miss Thomson, 16, slammed Sue Schoedeol of Portland 8 and 6 in their quarter-final match. Without losing a hole, Miss Thomson took six of the front nine holes and then fired three straight pars on the 10th, 11th and 12th holes to end the match.

The Victoria miss was to meet Susan Jacobsen of Portland in one of today's semi-final tussles. Miss Jacobsen advanced with a 7 and 5 Wednesday win over Dru Heiber of Spokane.

Nancy Peck of Eugene, Ore., and Patty Curtiss of Tacoma were scheduled to meet in the other semi. Miss Curtiss defeated Jill Badger of Vancouver 2-up and Miss Peck carded a 1-up victory over Laurie Campbell of Seattle in the quarter-finals.

Quebec Shooter Best at Bisley

BISLEY, England (CP) — Warrant Officer Jack Dugas of Neufchatel, Que., outshot the best marksmen of the British forces Wednesday to win the service rifle championship at Bisley.

The victory, based on the aggregate of a series of combat shooting events over two days, is the major event in which all the services compete on equal terms.

Dugas, a Royal 22nd Regiment infantry instructor who served with the peaeekeeping force in Cyprus, scored 397 out of a possible 470.

Sgt. Stan Pilkie of Oromocto, N.B., was runner-up with 375.

Pilkie finished in a tie with Britain's Capt. Gordon Clarke, but under the tie rules, the Canadian took the higher position because he had a better performance in the fire with movement competition.

Dugas is at Bisley with the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association team, primarily for next week's target rifle events, but as a leading service rifle competitor he has been shooting in all the service events.

Other Canadian Forces competitors among the prize-winners were Cpl. Laurent Labrecque, Victoriaville, Que., with 355; Cpl. Michael Nole, Valleyfield, Que., with 346; and Cpl. J. C. Pomerleau, with 342.

The Canadian Forces also won the Mappin Challenge Cup for the best aggregate in the rapid-fire competitions: The Canadian A team scored 478 out of a possible 600 and the Canadian B team was second with 454, beating the Royal Marines by 15 points.

Tura Family Helps Bellies

COQUITLAM — Brothers Ivan and Mark Tura helped the New Westminster Salmonbellies humble the Coquitlam J-Hawks, 20-12, Wednesday and snap a third-place tie in the Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League.

Mark Tura fired five goals and Ivan Tura scored twice, enabling New Westminster to move out of a deadlock with Richmond Roadrunners. Mario Govorchin scored three times for New Westminster, Brian Hazlewood and Jim Curley scored twice each.

Michelin radials can save on gas!

HOW

When a car is equipped with conventional bias-ply tires, rolling resistance and tread squirm combine to put heavy demands on your motor. The harder your motor has to work, the more fuel you use.

Michelin radials roll with far less rolling resistance because flexible radial sidewalls work in unison with a steel-cord belt beneath the tread to (1) minimize rolling resistance (2) reduce tread squirm. Your engine doesn't work as hard, therefore uses less gas . . . as proven by comparative tests.

Baseball Shows Attendance Jump

By CRAIG AMMERMAN
AP Sports Writer

Bucking economic bad times, major league baseball attendance is up about five per cent in 1975, a trend which would result in a record total of more than 31 million persons paying their way into the stadiums this season.

Perhaps because it's one of the cheapest forms of entertainment at a time when many cannot afford to travel far or spend much, baseball is enjoying a banner season. Fourteen teams show increased attendance figures at the all-star break, and three clubs have drawn more than a million paying customers.

An Associated Press survey found that the 24 clubs have attracted 16,817,710 persons paying their way into games this season, an increase of 4.8 per cent and 800,000 persons for the same number of games at this point in the 1974 season.

There could be a reversal in this upward trend if pennant races do not develop the remainder of the season. Cincinnati and Oakland are threatening runaways in their respective divisions, and Pittsburgh and Boston have comfortable leads in the two remaining divisions.

Not surprisingly, those are four of the teams showing attendance increases. And to prove that winning your division is not the only way to bring out the customers, New York Yankees and Milwaukee Brewers show the most dramatic attendance increases.

Chicago White Sox, Atlanta Braves and New York Mets, all doing worse than expected, have suffered the most, with each club showing a decline of more than 150,000 fans midway through the season.

The Yankees, meanwhile, have drawn 739,320 fans to Shea Stadium to see their revamped lineup which includes Jim "Catfish" Hunter and Bobby Bonds. That is 252,000 fans more than the Yankees had drawn at this time last year, an increase of nearly 52 per cent.

Milwaukee, with Henry Aaron in its lineup, has drawn 771,661 fans, an increase of 270,658 persons and a jump of 49 per cent over 1974.

Most of the increase is in the American League East, where only Detroit Tigers show a decline. Over-all, that division's attendance is up 20 per cent over 1974. The AL West, where Chicago and Kansas City show sharp declines, is virtually even with last year.

The National League East, where the Mets and Montreal are suffering significant declines, is down 1.4 per cent from 1974 even though Pittsburgh and Philadelphia show strong increases. The NL West, with the highest attendance of any division, is up 3.1 per cent.

Los Angeles Dodgers lead the majors, drawing 1.5 million. Cincinnati, with 1.23 million, and Philadelphia, with just over a million, are the other clubs with draws in seven figures.

San Francisco Giants' home attendance of 285,753 is the lowest in either league, a position the club held in 1974 as well. Meanwhile, the Giants' neighbors, Oakland A's, have drawn 614,024, an increase of 172,162 and 39 per cent.

The National League's attendance is up only .8 of a per cent this season, while the American League is up 10.3 per cent. But the NL has drawn 55 per cent of the fans —9,310,813 to 7,506,897 for the AL.

Gilbert Signed

NEW YORK (AP) — Right winger Rod Gilbert, leading scorer with New York Rangers last season, has signed a multi-year contract with the National Hockey League club, general manager Emile Francis announced Wednesday.

The 34-year-old Gilbert became a free agent in April when he finished the third year of a three-year contract. He did not have to play his option year because of a "consent decree" signed nearly two years ago between the NHL and the rival World Hockey Association.

Terms of his new contract were not disclosed. However, it was believed Gilbert was seeking a four-year contract with a raise from his estimated $175,000 annual salary.

Aussie Side Sharp

HOVE, England (Reuter) — Tony Greig, the new skipper for England, was given a reminder of the tough job ahead of him as the Australian cricketers piled up a huge first-innings score of 402 for seven declared against Sussex on the first day of their three-day match Wednesday.

Greig began the day well, taking a wicket in his first over, but then he watched Greg Chappell and Rick McCosker slam centuries against a Sussex attack that missed the penetration of England pace man John Snow, who was rested for this match.

Chappell brought Greig's misery to an end with the declaration, and by close Sussex had made 13 without loss.

Lloyd Paces Wings

Terry Lloyd fired six goals Wednesday night to spark Philadelphia Wings to a 22-10 win over Maryland Arrows in National Lacrosse League play.

Pele's Draw Fading?

Brian Godfrey's goal with 21 minutes left to play gave the visiting Portland Timbers a 2-1 North American Soccer League win over New York Cosmos Wednesday night before a disappointing crowd of 13,421.

Pele scored the lone New York goal when he headed in a rebound of a 25-yard drive by Luis De La Fuente with 15:46 gone in the second half.

The Brazilian superstar had two other good scoring opportunities but missed when his 35-yard kick hit the crossbar and bounced over the goal and again when he outleaped three defenders only to have his head shot go over the goal.

In other action, Ivan Lukacevic and Peter Roe scored two goals apiece to lead Toronto Metros-Croatia to a 5-0 victory over the Bicentennials in Hartford.

FAVELL NEXT TO GO?

TORONTO (CP) — Veteran goaltender Doug Favell appears likely to be the next victim of the youth movement instituted by president Harold Ballard of Toronto Maple Leafs.

Ballard said this week he is trying to trade the goalkeeper to another National Hockey League team.

The Leafs will rely on Gord McRae and Pierre Hamel, both rookies last year, and Wayne Thomas, who was third-stringer last year with Montreal Canadiens.

Ballard said he hadn't received a serious offer for Favell from any other NHL team but that Detroit Red Wings have expressed an interest in the goaltender.

"Doug didn't play very well for us last season but he's a good goalie. I look at how a man practices and relate it to how he plays in games. Doug wasn't going all out in practices and it wasn't good for team morale."

Favell has completed two years of a five-year contract with Toronto. The Leafs obtained him from Philadelphia Flyers in 1973 in return for all-star goalie Bernie Parent.

Favell would be the fifth Toronto veteran to go since the end of last season. The Leafs allowed Eddie Shack, Norm Ullman and captain Dave Keon to become free agents on June 1 and sold Bill Flett to Atlanta Flames.

Cyclist Injured

LAB REPORT, THEN INQUIRY

An inquiry into the death of a 60-year-old Brentwood motorist wll be held when a report by the laboratory in Vancouver is completed, coroner Edmond St. Jorre said Wednesday.

James Reginald Scaplen, 751 Harding, died at 12:30 p.m. Monday when the car he was driving went out of control and struck a steel lamppost on Pat Bay Highway just south of Elk Lake, Saanich police said.

Sex Books for Tots Held at Border

TORONTO (CP) — Executives of the Macmillan Co. of Canada Ltd. say they are undecided whether to risk obscentiy charges under the Criminal Code by distributing a sex picture book for children in Canada.

Canada's customs branch has informed Macmillan that 1,000 copies of the book which the Toronto publisher tried to import from New York have been held up at the border and one copy has been sent to the Toronto police morality squad for examination.

A York County Crown attorney has warned in a letter that charges are likely to be laid if anyone tries to show the book, entitled Show Me!, to county residents.

Authors say the book, subtitled A Picture Book of Sex for Children and Parents, was designed as a civilized tool to meet the normal sexual curisity of children.

Hugh Kane, vice-chairman of Macmillan, said the company has not decided whether a defence against censorship in this case is worth the headaches of a court fight. Macmillan would distribute the book for a United States publisher, not publish the book itself.

The Criminal Code makes it an offence to make, print, publish, distribute or circulate obscene written matter, pictures or other things or to possess them for these purposes.

Charges might be laid against individual company officers as well as the company.

The company has sought legal advice and "we have a dozen alternatives," he said. One is trying to distribute the book outside York County to avoid possible charges threatened by the Crown attorney.

Kane, father of an adult son and a 10-year-old daughter, said he would not show the book to his daughter.

"It just isn't the medium I would choose ... like I wouldn't recommend peanut butter for a child, I'd prefer to see her eat apples."

He added that he does not consider his own reaction to be relevant to the issue.

Sun-Dark Lenses 'May Harm Eyes'

HALIFAX (CP) — There is evidence that photochromic lenses, which turn dark in bright light, may harm the eyes but they are still being used in prescription glasses, the president of the Canadian Association of Optometrists said Wednesday.

Dr. Garson Lecker of Sydney, N.S., said at a news conference that the association is "questioning the efficiency" of such lenses.

Dr. Lecker said his own studies have found "photochromic lenses increase light sensitivity" and he disputed claims that the lenses return to their natural transparency after exposure to bright light.

Experiments indicated that repeated exposure to the sun and aging decrease the ability of the lenses to return to the transparent state.

Dr. Lecker said such lenses could be dangerous when worn by drivers, failing to eliminate glare since sunlight passing through a windshield does not change their tint and retaining tint at night to prevent a driver receiving enough light.

He said the lenses were not developed by an optometrist but by a glass company and "have attained a great amount of acceptance by an unknowing public who are asking for them in various tints."

Dr. Lecker said he personally prescribes such glasses only on demand and then only after warning the patient of the hazards involved.

Pen Caught Off Guard?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The CBC says prison authorities were caught off guard when hostages at the British Columbia Penitentiary turned on their three captors June 11.

The radio report says a squad armed with clubs was to be the first to enter the prison classification centre where the 41-hour siege occurred but the hostages' break-out attempt happened so fast, a backup squad armed with guns got there first.

Hostage Mary Steinhauser, 32, died in the gunfire that followed. Of the 14 hostages that survived, 12 have decided to quit the penitentiary service, the CBC says.

Chief Justice John Farris of the B.C. Supreme Court is conducting an inquiry into the incident. The inquiry was held in public at first but later went into in-camera sessions which were adjourned when one of the other two commissioners became ill.

The CBC says the hostages didn't plan their escape attempt in advance but some of them decided to try when prisoner Dwight Lucas, 20, fell asleep.

Prisoner Andy Bruce, 26, was wounded in the shooting. The other prisoner was Clair Wilson, 26. All are serving life terms.

The CBC says the prison tactical squad had specific men assigned to specific targets and prison authorities know who killed Miss Steinhauser.

The report, which does not reveal sources, also says Lucas wasn't shot because the guard assigned to him could not bring himself to pull the trigger.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Talks between officials at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre in nearby Burnaby and eight prisosers have ended with nothing accomplished, a member of the Prisoners Union Committee said Wednesday.

Leo McGrady, a Vancouver lawyer representing the PUC at the meetings, said Henry Bjarnason, director of the correctional centre also known as Oakalla, ended the talks and said it would be useless to continue them.

"We're not really sure why they ended," McGrady said of the talks. "We know the warden (Jarnason) has to go on five weeks vacation and that was mentioned when he said talks have ended."

The talks began July 2 after 130 male prisoners and 23 women prisoners ended a 21-hour sit-in to protest conditions at the provincial institution.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two embattled directors of the British Columbia Association of Non-Status Indians (BCANSI) resigned their positions Wednesday and said it would be a waste of their time to continue in such an ineffective organization.

Vice-president George Brown and director Doris Ronneberg announced their resignations in a press conferresignations in a press conference in front of totem poles in Stanley Park, three days after the rest of the 12-member board voted non-confidence in the pair.

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Only six persons appeared Wednesday for a hearing here of the five-member inquiry into the mobile home industry. Commission chairman Michael Audain said the commission usually has about 200 persons at its hearings. He said he wasn't sure whether apathy or few mobile home problems in northern B.C. caused the low attendance.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The University of B.C.'s board of governors has approved the expenditure of $135,000 for erosion protection at Wreck Beach and the Point Grey cliff areas. INDIANS NAME LANDS REP.

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Indian leaders have elected Adam Eneas, chairman of the Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs cut-off lands committee, to represent them in negotiations with the provincial government.

Greenpeace Gives Up On Whalers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace anti-whaling expedition has given up its hunt for the Soviet whaling fleet and should return here Sunday, a spokesman for the Greenpeace Foundation said Wednesday.

The spokesman said the Greenpeace V lost radio contact with the Soviet vessels Tuesday.

"We have to admit that the Russian fleet can outdistance us if it chooses," the spokesman said. "They simnply move faster than us."

He said the crew is at the limit of its psychological and financial resources.

"It is time for Greenpeace to regroup and take the struggle to save the whales to its next level. One thing is clear. The whales are even closer to extinction than was thought."

New SFU Policy Aimed At Canadian Teachers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Simon Fraser University board of governors adopted a new policy Tuesday that it hopes will lead to the hiring of more Canadians for SFU teaching jobs.

The move carries out a promise made by Pauline Jewett when she took over the SFU presidency last September.

In interviews at that time Dr. Jewett pledged to end discrimination against Canadians in hiring, noting that alleged bias in favor of Americans had caused several controversies in the university's history.

The new policy requires that an intensive search be conducted to find a qualified Canadian for each new position.

Only if that search fails can the university hire a highly qualified non-Canadians, according to a university press release.

The policy also states that regular appointments at the university will ordinarily be filled by Canadian citizens or those having had extensive academic training or experience in Canada.

Previously job openings had only to be advertised to Canadians, the press release said.

Lates figures show that 58 per cent of the SFU teaching staff are Canadian, compared to only 32 per cent three years ago, the release said.

Of the remaining faculty, 30 per cent are U.S. citizens.

4 EXTRADITED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four British Columbia men were ordered Wednesday extradited to New York to face charges arising out of an alleged heroin conspiracy.

There they will join 16 other persons on charges of conspiring to import $117.5 million worth of heroin into the United States from Thailand and Hong Kong and to export large quantities into Canada.

Planning Meeting Tonight

Planners will bounce some ideas off the public at a meeting tonight in another step toward developing a community plan for Colwood, Langford and Metchosin.

The meeting will be at Colwood community hall, 2219 Sooke Road, and will start at 7:30 p.m.

Meanwhile, John Marshall of the regional board's planning staff, said Wednesday that a workshop, where area residents can drop in to chat about and question planning for the "western community" will open at Belmont Fisher high school next Monday.

Planners had hoped to set up a mobile information office for the public, but suitable accommodation could not be found, Marshall said.

Instead, the workshop at the high school, to be open from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. weekdays through July and August, will have maps available and staff to answer questions.

Thursday's meeting is the second in a planned series aimed at involving the public in preparation of the western community's plans. The first, in mid-March, attracted about 200 people.

Each municipality and community in the capital district is preparing a community plan to further refine the over-all official regional plan approved last year.

Regional planner Peter Hammer has defined a community plan as a strategy which designates future use of the land, how it will be serviced with transit, water, sewerage and power, and how these will be paid for.

Colwood, Langford and part of Metchosin have been designated in the regional plan for potential urban development. Covering an area of 90 square miles and with a current population of about 20,000, planners anticipate the population to climb to 60,000 by 1996.

Hammer says the objective is to develop the community without destroying its character or the natural environment of the area.

Sooke Line Strung

The B.C. Telephone Co. is stringing new lines to a 400 lot subdivision and a proposed trailer park development in Sooke, customer service manager Bert Parker said. The project will cost $19,590.

HMCS Provider will be the scene of Wednesday's clinic, from 9 a.m. to noon and 1:15 to 4:15 p.m.

Thursday's clinic will be at UVic's Student Union Building, from 9 a.m. to noon and 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. while Friday's clinic will be in Eaton's home furnishings building, from 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1:15 to 4 p.m.

Five Employees Bound to Trade

Five employees of the Queen's Printer are properly within the jurisdiction of the printing trades, according to a finding of the B.C. Labor Relations handed down Wednesday.

A three-man panel of the board was asked to rule on a prior finding of the board's vice-chairman, which was confirmed by the decision.

The question was raised by the Public Service Commission which wanted a ruling on whether the five employees are excluded from the definition of employees within the terms of the Public Service Labor Relations Aco, which was referred to the LRB last December.

Some employees of the government printing bureau are certified to the B.C. Government Employees Union, others to the printing trades which cover plants in the private sector.

In their finding, LRB members John Baigent, Angus Macdonald and Graham Leslie concluded unanimously that the job functions of the three copy-typists and two stockmen excluded them from the popular and common definition of clerical and administrative employees.

Stop-Gap U.S. Ferry Rate Hike

ANACORATES (AP) — A stop-gap proposal that would raise ferry rates in Puget Sound and the San Juan Islands by 11 per cent is expected to be heard today by the state toll bridge authority.

The 11 per cent increase is being proposed by Representative Don Hansey of Bellingham as a temporary solution to ferry rates until another rate structure can be studied.

That rate structure, which earlier this year got the vote of the authority, would group ferry runs into four categories with the same price in each category. Some ferry runs would become more expensive, while prices on others would decrease.

There has been opposition to the flat-rate plan from the San Juan Islands where some say rates would go up as much as 60 per cent and hurt the tourist trade.

The 11-per-cent increase would erase half the $78 million unfinanced deficit anticipated over the next two years.

French School Move Postponed for a Year

Plans to move the independent French school at CFB Esquimalt into Macaulay elementary school in September have been postponed at least a year.

Department of national defence officials from Ottawa have informed Greater Victoria school board they are not prepared to finance the project.

The board had proposed that the DND school operate as a private "school within a school" for its first year at Macaulay, with DND paying teachers' salaries and rent.

Lt. Cmdr. Bernard Derible of CFB Esquimalt said DND is uncertain whether the advantages of being at Macaulay are worth the rent the school board would charge, when the present school building on the forces base is rent-free.

The small DND elementary school was opened in the fall of 1973 to provide French-language instruction to children of francophone servicemen.

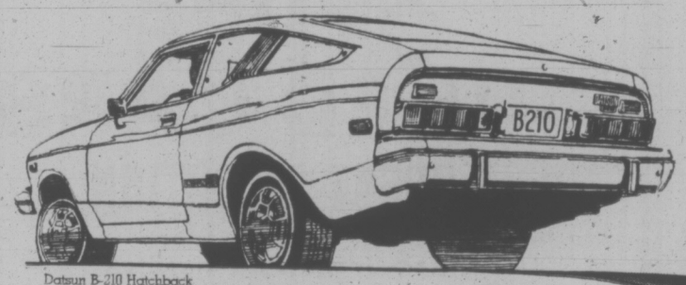
The francophone parents want their children to retain their fluency in French, but they would also like them to have the advantages the regular school system provides.

Talks about some kind of merger with Greater Victoria school board began a year ago.

Derible said the DND budget has been cut so much the department can't afford the extra cost of paying rent at Macaulay.

He said the school board should take into consideration the advantages the district would gain by having French-speaking children in the district.

"What we'd really like to see is the school board open a French public school," he said. "Then we'd give them all the help they need."



Datsun B-210 Hatchback

WE PUT A LITTLE "Z" SPIRIT INTO EVERY CAR WE BUILD.

Take the Datsun B210, for instance. Like all Datsuns it's got spirit you can feel. Spirit that starts with driving pleasure and smart styling and carries right on through to the low sticker price and high gas mileage.

The same engineering expertise that built the Datsun "Z" goes into every B210 we make. It's there in the snug, reclining bucket seats, and functional dash. And you can feel it in the sure-footed stopping of the power-assisted front disc brakes, and the smooth performance of the B210's synchromesh four-on-the floor or optional 3-speed automatic.

But best of all, the B210 has the Datsun spirit of economy, the typically high gas mileage of all Datsuns. In fact, no other car in Canada gets better gas mileage than a B210. It's proved in U.S. EPA tests, and you can prove it for yourself on the open road.

Routine Food Leave You Foggy?

The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — If strawberries and oysters bring out a fiery rash, you put it down to allergy and stop eating these foods.

If, on the other hand, unaccountable depression sets in after a routine breakfast of cornflakes and a boiled egg, or lethargy descends like a November fog, after you had a cheese sandwich and cup of coffee, you probably blame the weather, pollution, menopause, the bomb . . . anything but the food.

Yet that innocuous meal could well be the cause of these and many other ailments, according to Dr. Richard MacKarness, a British psychiatrist who has been working on the theory that many people are allergic to everyday foods. Instead of causing such recognizably allergic symptoms as rashes, spots and asthma, these foods affect the brain, causing anything from headaches and lack of energy to severe mental illness such as schizophrenia, chronic depression, or neurosis, he says.

Blaming the food we eat for any and every ill has become today's cause celebre, but no one could accuse MacKarness of jumping on the bandwagon. He has spent the past 10 years championing his idea, although it was ignored by the skeptical physicians around him.

MacKarness has had some substantial successes ranging from a seven-year-old incorrigibly delinquent boy, to a young woman in the psychiatric intensive care unit who had been variously diagnosed as having schizophrenia, depression, pre-senile dementia and hysteria. Both recovered after he diagnosed their food allergies.

MacKarness is the first to admit that not every case he handles is a complete success, but he does say that most improve greatly.

MacKarness explains: "I do not usually take patients until they have tried all the traditional medical investigations and treatments; that way other causes for the symptoms can be ruled out. Frequently, if a person is allergic to a food, he is also addicted to it and so it is eaten regularly and often."

STRETCH CAN OF CORNED BEEF

By MARY MOORE

My English cousin Dee gave me this idea. She said "Here's a stretcher for you Mary. Use one can corned beef to make one of those English Pub type pies."

Since I was to be in Ottawa I delayed my test until I could try it on my daughter's family. The young people enter into the spirit of my trial cooking and nodded vigorous approval.

ENGLISH PUB PIE

(deep 9")

Pastry:

1¼ c. all-purpose flour
½ tsp. salt
Scant ½ cup margarine
3½ tbsp. cold water

Filling:

3 medium-large potatoes cooked in skins
2 medium onions chopped
2½ tbsp. margarine or beef fat
3 tbsp. flour
1½ c. hot water
1 tbsp. chicken bouillon cordial
¼ tsp. salt
One 7-oz. can corned beef (Fray Beritos—87c)

To make pastry cut margarine into flour and salt until size of peas. Drizzle in water tossing with a fork. Pack dough into a ball between your palms and roll out on lightly floured board to fit deep 9" pie plate. Trim and flute edge.

To make filling pare and chop potatoes, which have been cooked in their skins, into ½" cubes.

In large frying pan melt the 2½ tablespoons margarine or beef fat and gently saute chopped onion in it for 5 minutes. Stir in flour, then stir in hot water, cordial and salt until thickened. Remove from heat and add cubed potatoes and broken up corned beef and combine.

Turn into pastry-lined pie plate, sprinkle top with paprika and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. about 35 minutes until set.

An economical meal for six.

Write to Mary Moore, 32 Churchill Ave., Hamilton, Ont., enclosing stamped self-addressed envelope and 10 cents for each specified recipe.

YOU CAN'T BEAT Home-made GOOD

It's B.C. cherry time again...so now's the time to make all those delicious cherry dishes your family loves...and of course there's no better treat than eating cherries just as they come...right out of the fruit bowl. Your family really appreciates the good things you make yourself, so be sure to try these great ways to serve B.C. cherries!

B.C. CHERRIES

FRESH CHERRY PUFFS

2 cups fresh B.C. Cherries
1-1/2 cups dairy sour cream
1 cup white miniature marshmallows
4 tablespoons granulated sugar
1/2 teaspoon almond flavouring

Wash, pit, and slice cherries. Blend sour cream, marshmallows, sugar and flavouring; chill, covered, several hours. Meanwhile, make up your favourite "cream puff" recipe, to yield 10 puffs when baked. Cool, split puffs, remove webbing.

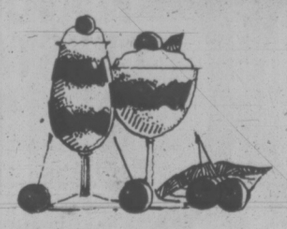
Add sliced cherries to chilled sour cream mixture. Spoon about 1/4 cup filling into each cooled puff; place top on: spoon more filling on top if desired; garnish with whole cherries. Makes 10 large puffs. (Recipe for cherry filling can be reduced to serve fewer people, if desired; freeze extra puffs.)

EASY CHERRY FREEZER JAM

2-1/2 cups crushed, pitted fresh B.C. Cherries
4 cups granulated sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
3/4 cup water
1 package (2 ounces) powdered Certo

Place cherries in a bowl; add sugar and lemon juice; let stand 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add water to Certo in a saucepan; bring to boil; boil 1 minute. Remove from heat; stir in cherry mixture; stir 2 minutes. Ladle into 6-8 jelly glasses or freezer cartons. Let stand overnight or for 24 hours, covered with a cloth. Cover with waxed paper; then metal or cardboard lids. Freeze. To use, thaw and store in refrigerator.

Note: Freezer jams have a softer consistency than jams made using the conventional method.



CHERRY CRUNCH PARFAIT

1/2 cup fresh B.C. Cherries
1 package (4-serving size) vanilla pudding and pie filling mix
2-1/4 cups milk
1/2 cup grape-nuts cereal
1/4 cup dark brown sugar
2 tablespoons melted margarine

Sweeten cherries to taste; let stand several hours. Drain cherries well, reserving any juice for use in a jelly or sauce later. Make pudding and pie filling according to package directions, but increasing the milk to 2-1/4 cups. Cool completely; stir in drained cherries. Combine cereal, brown sugar, and melted margarine. Alternately spoon pudding and cereal mixture into individual parfait glasses, starting and ending with pudding. Chill. Garnish with whipped cream, and more cherries if desired. Serves 5.

CHERRY POULTRY SAUCE

1 Pound fresh B.C. Cherries
1 cup chicken broth
1/4 cup Madeira wine
1 orange, juice and grated rind
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons red currant jelly

Wash and pit cherries. Bring chicken broth, wine, orange juice, and rind to the boil in a saucepan; adding any pan juices and brown bits (removing fat first) from the cooking of the bird. Add cherries; simmer 5 minutes. Add cornstarch mixed to a smooth paste with the water. Cook, stirring constantly, until sauce is clear. Add jelly; stir until dissolved. Carve the bird and pass the hot sauce separately. Enough sauce for a 5-6 pound chicken, turkey, duck or 4-5 Cornish game hens.

ORANGE CHERRY LAYER CAKE

Make an orange angel-food cake in a 10-inch tube pan; cool completely; cut into 3 layers. Whip 1-1/2 cups heavy cream with 3 tablespoons sugar; fold about 3 cups pitted and quartered fresh B.C. cherries into whipped cream. Spoon cherry—cream filling between layers and on top of cake. Chill. Garnish with more whole cherries.

BRANDIED CHERRY MOULD

Marinate about 3 cups pitted fresh B.C. Cherries in 1/4 cup brandy for 2-3 hours. Drain over a measuring cup; add water to cherry liquid to make 3/4 cup liquid. Prepare a 3-ounce package "black cherry" jelly powder using 1 cup boiling water to dissolve and then the 3/4-cup cold cherry liquid. When jelly begins to set, fold in drained cherries. Place in 4-cup jelly mould, refrigerate until set. Unmould and serve with sweetened whipped cream.

TASTY CHERRY TREATS

- Pit cherries and whirl in the blender with milk and ice cream for a refreshing summer shake
- Drizzle sparkling Burgundy or crackling Rosé over cherries and chill for an elegant dessert.
- Fill a pineapple slice centre with cream cheese and surround with fresh cherries for a quick summer salad.
- Alternate cherries with cooked pork butt and slices of pineapple on skewer to barbecue.

Yakitori Sophisticated Example of Grill Cooking

CRAIG CLAIBORNE

NEW YORK (NYT) — Semantics has a curious way of coloring thought and history.

The United States, of course, is the land of what is known as the barbecue world; and many learned treatises have been written as to the origin of the word.

Some sources say it is from an American-Spanish word, barbacao, which describes a grill consisting of rotary sticks set on posts.

Whatever the case, barbecue seems synonymous in many minds with grilled foods of any sort; thus the false assumption that grilled dishes are of Yankee origin.

Nothing, obviously, is further from the truth. It takes little enough reason to know that grilled foods must have come about shortly after the advent of fire and many thousand years before Charles Lamb wrote his famed dissertation on roast pig.

A short while back, during a visit to Japan, we made frequent excursions to yakitori restaurants and reflected then that yakitori, which must go back a few hundred years, must be a relatively advanced and sophisticated example of cooking grilled foods.

Actually, yakitori is a combination of two Japanese words, yaki, meaning grilled, and tori, meaning birds.

The most usual bird used for yakitori is chicken, which is, more often than not, cut into boneless cubes and arranged on skewers before grilling. The pieces include not only the flesh but the hearts, livers, gizzards and so on as well.

The skewered portions are brushed when grilling with a fairly sweet sauce composed generally of sake, mirin, soy sauce and honey among other things. The sauce is known as yankitori-no-tare.

Bone the light and dark meat of a chicken, setting aside the heart, liver, gizzard and so on.

Cut the light and dark meats into bite-size cubes. Arrange the cubes on skewers. If desired, arrange one- or two-inch chicken pieces.

Trim and cut away the tough, muscular parts of the gizzards if used. Arrange the tender gizzard pieces on skewers.

Arrange the liver and heart on skewers. Grill the unseasoned chicken pieces, brushing as necessary with yakitori-no-tare (see recipe).

Cook, turning often, until the chicken pieces are done. Remove from the heat, sprinkle with lemon and serve hot.

Note: Although strictly speaking only chicken or other fowl is used for yakitori, many restaurants also include other skewered foods, mushroom caps, asparagus wrapped in bacon, steak bits and so on.

YAKITORI-NO-TARE

Chicken bones (optional)
½ cup sake
½ cup mirin (sweet Japanese cooking wine), available in wine and spirit shops in Japanese communities
1-3 cup or slightly more coarsely cracked rock sugar (see note)
1 cup dark soy sauce (see note)
2 to 3 tablespoons honey.

1. If chicken bones are used, cook them over a charcoal fire turning often and without burning. Crack them and add them to a saucepan. Add the sake, mirin, rock sugar and soy sauce. Bring to the boil and cook three minutes.

2. Stir in the honey and boil two minutes longer. Let stand. Strain before using. Use to brush chicken on skewers as it is grilled.

Yield: About two and one-half cups.

One of the finest and most delicate of Japanese grilled foods is shioyaki, which is perhaps even more primitive than yakitori.

Shioyaki is a notably low-calory dish, and the name is a blend of shio, meaning salt, and yaki, which, as indicated, means grilled or broiled.

Shioyaki is, in effect, a piece of fish, generally salmon, that has been salted without aging before it is grilled over charcoal until just cooked through.

It can be made with almost any edible fish and it is only both grilled and served without oil or butter. Only a small wedge of lemon.

SHOIYAKI

(Salt-grilled salmon)
1½ pounds salmon
1 tablespoon salt
¼ cup sake, optional
6 lemon wedges

1. Place the salmon on a board, preferably wooden, and sprinkle it with salt on all sides. Tilt the board at a small angle so that any liquid given up by the fish because of the salf will drain.

Let the fish stand in a very cool place three or four hours.

2. Cut the salmon into individual serving pieces of about a quarter pound each. Rinse each individual piece quickly in cold water and pat dry.

3. Skewer the fish, preferably using two skewers for each serving so that they do not break while cooking. Grill it over hot coals skin side down about two minutes. Continue grilling, turning the pieces ts necessary so that they cook evenly throughout.

4. When cooked, douse the fish with sake and flame it. Serve with lemon wedges.

Yield: Six servings.

DASHI OR SOUP STOCK

5 cups cold water
1 large square or rectangle kombu (kelp, measuring in the vicinity of seven by seven inches (see note))
3 cups loosely packaged katsuobushi or dried bonito shavings (see note)

1. Place the five cups of water in a saucepan and add the kombu. Bring to boil and immediately remove the kombu. Do not let the kombu cook.

2. Add the katsuobushi and stir. Remove from the heat immediately. Strain immediately through flannel.

Yield: About five cups.

MISOSHIRU

(Japanese bean soup)
3 cups dashi or soup stock (see recipe)
1-3 cup miso (bean paste), available in Japanese food outlets
⅛ teaspoon monosodium glutamate, optional
½ cup thinly sliced fresh mushrooms (see note)
2 or 3 tablespoons chopped scallions for garnish

1. Pour the dashi into a saucepan and add the bean paste, stirring constantly. Taste the soup. If it is not strong enough, stir in a little more bean paste. If it is too strong, thin it with more dashi.

2. When ready to serve, strain the soup into another saucepan. Add the monosodium glutamate and mushrooms. Bring to the boil and pour equal quantities into three soup bowls. Garnish each serving with chopped scallions.

Yield: Three servings.

Note: Many ingredients can be added to this soup including bean curd cut into cubes.

Cottage Walls 'Must Have Bulged'

elizabeth forbes

Believe it or not — around the beginning of this century, a neat little cottage stood at the corner of Oak Bay Avenue and Hampshire Road, where Burgess ladieswear is now situated. And to that cottage in those early years, William Noble brought his wife Sarah and 10 children, from a farm in Manitoba.

"How we ever got into that tiny house I'll never know, the walls must have bulged," says Edith Chapman, now in her 98th year and one of three of the 10 Nobles still alive.

The others are Mrs. Myrtle Wilson and George Noble of Cedar Hill Crossroad.

Mrs. Chapman remembers it was "all country" in Oak Bay when the family arrived. Also that her father acquired 2½ acres of land behind the cottage and invested in a herd of milk cows.

"We children had to be home around four in the afternoon to help milk those cows," she says, "and to call them in we went down a dirt lane our father named Hampshire Road, and through barred gates into the fields."

Noble soon built a larger home on a part of the acreage he called Hampshire Terrace, and there the 10 children grew up and the family lived for many years.

"That house is still standing," Edith Chapman told me," the old stone milk house is there, too."

Milk was kept in large pans covered with cheesecloth in that milk house "and we took the thick, yellow cream off those pans with a skimmer shaped like a big shell with holes in it."

They made butter, too. At first entirely by hand, then with a churn and dasher and finally in a churn with a handle that was turned by hand much like those on the old icecream freezers.

Mrs. Chapman's memories of those early days include her first sight of a Chinese wearing a pigtail. "We were frightened of them but we soon learned they were a friendly people."

She remembers the shuttle street cars that ran from Oak Bay to "The Junction" where Fort and Pandora Streets and Oak Bay Avenue all came together.

"We had to change there to street cars going down Fort and into the town . . . the fare was five cents and you could get six tickets for twenty-five cents."

She tells you with no little pride that young folk in those days "made their own fun" and while the Nobles were "strict Methodists and no cards or dancing allowed," they did enjoy their growing-up years.

They attended the old boys' and girls' Central School, went to Sunday School in an old house connected with Metropolitan Methodist Church (now Metropolitan United) and when that became too small, in an Oddfellows' Hall, then on Fernwood Road.

Later again their parents assisted in building a church hall in the Fernwood area, forerunner of the first Belmont Church.

The young people joined a Methodist Epworth League where the social program included "hiring bicycles and setting off for rides around the outskirts of the town."

"I came down that hill once after my feet had slipped from the pedals," Edith Chapman says with a reminiscent laugh. "When I reached the bottom I was going full tilt . . . but I didn't fall off."

Epworth League members would also get together, rent boats at a float "opposite the new Empress Hotel" and row up the Gorge and under the bridge to the Japanese gardens.

MRS. CHAPMAN
. . . Oak Bay 'country'

By then Oak Bay was starting to grow and those who lived in the district decided the time had come for some sort of organized effort for orderly expansion.

They got together and in 1906 the first Oak Bay Council was formed with W. E. Oliver the reeve and William Noble one of the councillors.

Meetings were held in a little building they named the City Hall, just about where the Oak Bay Theatre now stands.

Edith Noble met her future husband, Jack Chapman, a clerk in Carne's Grocery and later to be with wholesaler grocers, Stewart and Slade, when they were both active in Belmont Church work.

After their marriage they lived in a house on Gladstone Avenue where the two children were born — Winnifred, now Mrs. Noel Thompson, 618 Oliver Street, and Jack, who died a short time ago.

Following her husband's death, Mrs. Chapman moved from the Gladstone place, first to Nanaimo to be near the Thompson family then living in that city, next to West Vancouver to join a sister in running a baby's wear shop and later back to a senior citizens home in Nanaimo, when the Thompsons were on Gabriola Island.

"I was independent and lived alone right up to the day I fell and hurt my back and was in hospital for along time and unable to move," she told me.

Sheer will-power put this determined little woman back on her feet and today, while she is now in residence at Clovelly Nursing Home, she is walking again and caring for herself.

She still maintains a lifelong love of attractive clothes and the day I met her at her daughter's home on Oliver Street, was wearing a lovely blue flowered print in the latest style with a pink wool sweater and matching jewelry. Her hair, with its natural wave, was smartly cut and arranged. And she said "as one grows older it is more and more important to be nicely dressed."

However, she is still able to read large print books from the Victoria Public Library. "They bring them out to me at Clovelly and take them back again . . . it's a wonderful service and I mtke good use of it."

Her mind is still keen, although she confesses "I am a little forgetful now".

She is interested in everything that goes on around her and especially in "the doings" of her family, including five grandchildren and eight great-grands.

And she says "at 97 going on 98 what more can you ask?"

Canning Procedures For Safe Preserves

Canning is an economical way of preserving high quality produce when it is plentiful. The most important step besides selecting freshly picked, tender, young vegetables and firm, ripe fruits is to follow safe canning procedures.

To can right, use airtight containers and process fruits and vegetables long enough and at a temperature high enough to destroy bacteria, yeasts and molds. Spoilage occurs in raw fruits and vegetables from the growth of organisms always present in air, water and soil. There is also deterioration from natural enzymes within the plant tissues which may change flavor, color and texture. If the food is heated to a sufficiently high temperature, the spoilage organisms and enzymes are destroyed.

There are two methods of processing: the boiling water bath and the pressure canner. For the boiling water bath, you can use almost any large kettle with a rack and tightly fitting lid, so long as it is deep enough to allow at least two inches of boiling water over the top of the containers. This method is recommended for fruits and tomatoes only. Because of their natural acidity, the temperature reached in the boiling water bath is sufficient to destroy spoilage organisms.

With the exception of tomatoes, vegetables contain little acid and need a much higher temperature to destroy the spoilage organisms. This temperature can only be reached under pressure. Therefore, a pressure canner with an accurate gauge must be used for processing vegetables. Be sure the rubber gasket, vent and safety valve are clear and in good order. Follow the procedure recommended by the manufacturer. Usually 10 pounds pressure is recommended. Timing is also very important as certain bacteria may survive heat processing in vegetables unless held at a high temperature for a sufficient length of time. Do not use a pressure cooker as you cannot be sure the pressure is accurate.

Early summer brings to our market fresh green or wax beans, baby carrots, tender peas and sour cherries. For those who would like to preserve this flavor under glass, follow these directions from food advisory services, Agriculture Canada.

GREEN OR WAX BEANS:

Wash and remove ends. Leave beans whole or cut in pieces. Cover with boiling water. Cover, bring to boil and boil three minutes. Pack hot. Add ½ teaspoon salt to each pint jar or 1 teaspoon salt to each quart jar. Cover with hot cooking liquid from beans, leaving ½-inch headspace. Process in a pressure canner at 10 pounds pressure, 30 minutes for pint jars or 35 minutes for quart jars.

BABY CARROTS:

Wash and scrape young tender carrots. Cover with boiling water. Cover, bring to boil and boil five minutes. Pack hot in upright position, alternating stem and root ends. Add ½ teaspoon salt to each pint jar or 1 teaspoon salt to each quart jar. Cover with boiling water, leaving ½-inch headspace. Process in a pressure canner at 10 pounds pressure, 30 minutes for pint jars or 35 minutes for quart jars.

PEAS:

Shell and wash young, tender peas. Cover with boiling water. Cover, bring to boil and boil 1 minute. Pack hot, loosely. Add ½ teaspoon salt to each pint jar or 1 teaspoon salt to each quart jar. Cover with hot cooking liquid from peas, leaving 1-inch headspace. Process in a pressure canner at 10 pounds pressure, 40 minutes for pint jars or 45 minutes for quart jars.

SOUR CHERRIES: (Solid Pack)

Wash, stem and pit cherries. Crush part of fruit in bottom of preserving kettle. Add remaining fruit and heat a few minutes. Stir occasionally and, if necessary, add a little water to prevent scorching. Pack alternate layers of fruit and sugar (¾ to one cup per quart jar) in containers. Crush fruit down slightly so that it is covered with its own juice. Leave ½ inch headspace, close containers and process in boiling water bath 20 minutes for pint jars or 25 minutes for quart jars. Best used in pies and puddings.

Since there is a danger of food poisoning in underprocessed low-acid vegetables kept in airtight jars, do not taste home-canned vegetables before boiling them. Bring the vegetables to a rolling boil, cover and boil 10 minutes. Never taste any canned food that looks abnormal, foams or spurts, or has an off-odor. Destroy this food in such a way that it cannot be picked up by children or animals.

Once a jar of canned vegetables is opened, keep it refrigerated.

Blanch Vegetables, Then Freeze

To blanch or not to blanch seems to be the question many homemakers are asking themselves when they consider freezing vegetables.

According to food advisory services, Agriculture Canada, you should blanch most vegetables before freezing them. In their natural state, vegetables contain chemical substances called enzymes. If these are not controlled by blanching (pre-cooking), they will cause undesirable changes in the flavor, color and texture of the vegetables when frozen.

For blanching, you will need a large kettle with a cover. Use four quarts (20 cups) of water to about one pound of vegetables; eight quarts for leafy vegetables.

Place the vegetables in a wire basket or tie loosely in a cheesecloth bag leaving a length of string attached to facilitate handling. Lower into the vigorously boiling water, place cover on kettle and immediately start counting the blanching time. Keep heat on high so that the water will quickly return to a boil. Follow exactly the blanching time recommended for each vegetable because underblanching or overblanching by a minute or two will make quite a difference in the quality of the vegetable. As soon as the water returns to a vigourous boil, remove cover and move basket up and down several times or, using a wooden spoon, force bag down in water to ensure uniform blanching.

Chill the vegetables immediately after blanching by placing them in cold, running water. If running water is not available, use ice to keep the water cold. As soon as the vegetables are cold, drain them thoroughly.

Do not allow them to remain in the cooling water any longer than necessary.

Pack the chilled, well-drained vegetables in freezer containers. Label each package or container, indicating the kind of vegetable and date of packing. Place the filled containers in the freezer as soon as possible. Frozen vegetables will keep at -18 degs. C (0 deg. F) for one year.

BEETS:

Select only young beets that are firm, smooth and free from cracks and blemishes. Leave root ends on beets. Cut off tops leaving one-inch stems. Wash beets. Cook in boiling water until tender. Cool quickly. Peel and slice or dice. No blanching is required. Pack dry.

CARROTS:

Select only young, tender carrots. Remove tops, wash thoroughly and scrape or peel. Leave small carrots whole. Dice larger carrots or cut crosswise in ¼-inch slices or lengthwise in ½-inch fingers. Blanch out carrots 3 minutes and whole carrots 5 minutes. Chill quickly, drain thoroughly. Pack dry.

SPINACH:

Select only tender leaves. Remove all discolored or bruised leaves and heavy stems. Wash thoroughly in several waters, lifting leaves from water each time to allow sand to settle to bottom of pan. Blanch 2 minutes. Chill quickly. Avoid matting of the leaves. Drain thoroughly. Pack dry.

BEANS:

Select young, tender beans. Wash, trim ends and string, if necessary. Leave whole, cut in 1-inch pieces or lengthwise in strips. Blanch cut beans 3 minutes and whole beans 4 minutes. Chill quickly, drain thoroughly. Pack dry.

The four-page folder Color Magic With Paint says that color is the least expensive method of beautifying your home. Of all available methods paint is by far the most economical.

The folder also explains what paint styling can do for your rooms. Paint styling is the technique by which you can emphasize the good features of a room, a house or a piece of furniture and minimize the less attractive ones.

For instance, if you paint the walls and ceiling of a room in a light tint, the room will seem larger than if you paint them in a dark tone. Similarly, a ceiling that looks too high can be made to seem lower by painting it a darker color than the walls. In the same way, a low ceiling can be 'raised' by painting it white or in a lighter shade than the walls.

The folder is packed with color do's and don'ts. For instance, always use harmonious colors in adjoining rooms. Consider building a color scheme around a painting, a fabric or a rug, provided you like the color. Your color sample should always be lighter than the final result you intend to produce.

With your request please enclose a long (No. 10) self-addressed, stamped envelope and send it to: Customer Relations Division, Canadian Paint Manufacturers Association, 1080 Beaver Hall Hill, Montreal 128, Que. Please allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.

Organic Fertilizers Don't Hike Nutrients

QUESTION: My coach has said not to drink milk before track meets because it causes "cotton mouth." Is there any basis for this?

ANSWER: "Cotton mouth" refers to a dryness of the mouth. Saliva flow is related to the water content of the body, the amount of perspiration and the emotional state. It is not affected by the type of food eaten.

Milk is not only a good source of protein and riboflavin, but a major source of calcium. If it is deleted for some time, your diet will likely become deficient in calcium.

QUESTION: There is so much controversy over the benefits of organically grown food verus chemically fertilized food. Is one nutritionally superior?

ANSWER: Research has proven that "organic" fertilizers do not improve the nutrient content of foods. This is determined genetically, according to the variety of the plant. Crop yield and item size are the factors affected by fertilizers. Chemical (inorganic) fertilizers (this does not include pesticides and chemical additives) tend to promote more uniform products and greater yields that "organic" fertilizers.

Furthermore, elements that are essential to plant growth enter the plant in inorganic form, due to the action of bacteria in the soil whether originally from an "organic" or inorganic source. Soil deplete in trace minerals will produce grains and cereals deplete in those same minerals whether "organic" or inorganic nitrogen is added as fertilizer.

Victoria Actor Hurt in P.E.I. Crash

Singer-actor Bill Hosie, member of a well-known Victoria stage family, has been injured in a car accident in Charlottetown, P.E.I.

Hosie, who is playing in the Charlottetown Festival productions of Johnny Belinda and Kronenberg, received a dislocated shoulder in the accident which took place Saturday.

With Vancouver's Rona Hearn, who received a fractured pelvis and broken ribs, and Christine Chandler of Toronto whose multiple fractures are compounded by internal injuries, Hosie was driving to an after-performance party at his home when his car collided with a vehicle involved in a police chase.

DAY CARE CENTRE LOOKING FOR SPACE

A day care centre which has operated in the Metropolitan United Church for seven years has been asked to move out by the end of August but has found no place to relocate.

The centre at 1411 Quadra, caters to single working mothers and parents with some of the children having special needs, Jane Gurr, director of day-care information for the human resources department, said Tuesday.

The church has offered an extension on the deadline if a new location has not been found in time for a start of September classes, Gurr said. She hopes the centre will not shut down permanently.

Rev. Albert King, Metropolitan pastor, said the church needs the space the centre is using.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Back in 1951, in an article in the "Bridge World" magazine, it was stated that "the Italians impressed us very much as a potentially fine team. They lacked the experience that comes with mature age, but when they acquire this, they will be an extremely difficult team to beat."

How prophetic this utterance was is attested to by the fact that during the past two decades the Italians have been the perennial World Champions. But before coming of age, they were just another bridge-playing aggregation. This can be evidenced in part in today's deal, which came up during the 1951 World Championships, in the match between Italy and the United States.

In the deal, the Italians were talked out of their "rightful heritage" by the American East defender, John R. Crawford.

North-South vulnerable. East deals.

Crawford's opening one-heart bid was a pure, unadulterated "psychic" bid (defined as "bidding what you don't have, or bluffing, in order to create the illusion of strength, or to conceal a weakness.") Such bids are seldom made in top-level play, for experience has demonstrated that their employment is suicidal much more often than not. But on this day, the psychic bid paid a handsome dividend.

South's pass was what is known as a "trap" pass. It was South's hope that East-West would get too high in their bidding, and South could then make a penalty double.

After East had passed, and North had made a take-out double, South assumed that North's reopening double was on the light side; and that Crawford had a minimum opening bid. So South evidently gave up on the possibility of making a slam, and he bid merely three notrump. As is evident, South could have made 15 tricks, if he needed them.

When the deal was replayed, East passed and the American South player, Sam Stayman, opened with one club, to which North, George Rapee, responded one diamond. When South then rebid two notrump, showing 19-20 high-card points, North put the hand in seven notrump, practically every high card in being able to account for the deck.

	NORTH ♠ K Q 8 6 ♥ A J 9 ♦ A K J 9 ♣ J 4
WEST ♠ J 10 9 2 ♥ 8 7 4 3 ♦ 7 4 2 ♣ 8 2		EAST ♠ 7 5 3 ♥ 6 5 2 ♦ 10 5 3 ♣ 10 9 6 5
	SOUTH ♠ A 4 ♥ K Q 10 ♦ Q 8 6 ♣ A K Q 7 3

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♥ (!)	Pass	Pass	Dbl.

Summer: Heavy Hot Foods Are Out of Season

By WILLIAM RICE

WASHINGTON (WP) — Early summer is a time for parties and receptions. Often drinks and appetizers are more appropriate than a complete meal, but what to serve?

Heavy, hot foods are out of season. Dips with potato or corn chips are as prevalent at cocktail parties as ice cubes. With the exception of carrot and celery sticks, raw vegetables were once esoteric fare. No longer.

Faced with the challenge, of providing something out of the ordinary, the first place I turn is to the onion. Onion sandwiches may not appear to be ideal for a gathering, but with the use of parsley these (made popular in New York ago by James Beard in his days as a caterer) are as inoffensive as they are delicious.

This is an example of dressing up something humble, the onion, in such a way it needn't be embarrassed to be presented in the finest company. Similarly, perform a twist on the vegetable theme by dressing up the plebeian potato with sour cream and crowning it with caviar.

With these economies (an ounce or so of caviar goes a long way), it is possible to splurge somewhat and choose a meat such as cold, sliced steak or cold fish such as salmon or shrimp. Shrimps are a drawing card at any party. If they have been well spiced during cooking, a runny sauce is unnecessary and they may be served shelled or unshelled depending on the mood of the party.

Fish appetizers make logical accompaniments to white wine and with more people choosing wine in place of cocktails at parties these days, it may be appropriate to continue the fish theme with a salmon mousse. As with the shrimp, this blender mousse may be prepared in the morning or even the day before the party. Arrange the shrimp around and inside the mousse ring as the center piece. The mousse may be eaten on plates with forks or spread on toast rounds.

In place of dishes of peanuts, scatter several plates of stuffed dates about the room. Make the dip "dipless" by placing one such as guacamole inside cherry tomato shells.

A selection like this, along with beverages should prove sufficient for a gathering of 15 or 50.

ONION SANDWICHES
Makes 18

1 loaf (1 pound) egg bread
2 small onions (about 2 inches in diameter)
1 cup or more chopped fresh parsley
Half cup mayonnaise
Salt and pepper (optional)

If bread is unsliced, cut loaf into ¼-inch or less slices. Select a cookie cutter that will provide 2 rounds a slice (about 1½ inch size) and cut each slice. (For fun, and for those who are hesitant to try an onion sandwich, a ¾-inch cutter may be used on remaining bread to make rounds for an equal number of tiny sandwiches.)

Cut onions into very thin slices. Place parsley in a soup plate or low sided dish.

Spread one side of each round with mayonnaise. Place onion slice on one round (removing outer rings until it fits inside circle), salt and pepper if desired, then dip mayonnaise side of second round into parsley and press together to form a sandwich. Spread mayonnaise around side of sandwich and roll edge through parsley to coat circumference.

These sandwiches may be prepared several hours ahead, or even the night before. Wrap well and refrigerate.

STUFFED DATES

1 box (1 pound) pitted dates
6 ounces cream cheese, softened.
¼ teaspoon ground cardamon
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ cup chopped pecans

Mix cream cheese with cardamom, soy, worcestershire, lemon juice and nuts. Fill date cavities. Refrigerate until half an hour before serving.

CAVIAR POTATOES

Select smallest possible new or red potatoes. Clean, rub skin with oil and baked in 375-degree oven for 30 to 40 minutes, or until cooked through. Cook. Peel away a cap from the top of each, cut or scoop out about 1-3 of the pulp. Fill with sour cream and top with a dab of caviar. Cut potatoes larger than bite-size in half after baking and hollow out exposed halves. Slice off bases when necessary to allow potatoes to stand without tipping over. A half-pint of sour cream and a 1½-ounce jar of caviar will suffice for 2 to 3 dozen of these.

Dad: Beware Of Daughter

PERU, Ind. (AP) — When Debra Bakehorn got her beginner's permit to drive a car, everybody in town knew about it. Her father took out an ad in the newsppaper that said: "Warning. All drivers and pedestrians should be aware that Debra Bakehorn has received her beginner's permit through an oversight. This has been a public service message."

Interrupted In Mid Prayer

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I knew Lt. Col. John W. Kellogg, the Catholic who proudly wore a Star of David, a symbol of the Jewish faith, in honor of three Jewish comrades in arms.

John was a bomber navigator in Second World War. After a bombing run over the Ploesti oil fields in Rumania, his plane was badly shot up. While the plane limped back to the Air Force base in Italy, the men tossed out everything that was loose to lighten the plane's load until nothing remained but the shell. It looked as though they weren't going to make it. When the Italian coastline was spotted, the captain ordered all his men to prepare to parachute to earth.

John bailed out and landed in a plowed field where an Italian farmer and his son were working. John was so grateful to be on terra firma that he dropped to his knees and began a prayer of thanksgiving.

The two Italians, having witnessed the scene, came over, doffed their caps, bowed their heads and also began to pray — loudly.

After a few moments, John looked up and said, "F'chrissakes, shut up! I can't hear my own prayers!" The John I knew could be both reverent and irreverent.

ROY

DEAR ROY: Thanks for the memories!

DEAR ABBY: How do I go about telling the girl whom our son dates to please stop buying our family expensive gifts for every occasion? We do not want them because we can't afford to reciprocate.

She has a very large family, and because she gave everyone in our family she ever said hello to a very expensive Christmas gift last year, my son felt that he had to do the same for her family. (He is still paying for them.)

For St. Valentine's Day she gave ME a present and also my husband. On Mother's Day, another one, and she's not even engaged to our son. She even found out when our birthdays were (mine and my husband's, the other childrens', even the grandparents!) and the presents come.

Please, please help me solve this. I have no objections to her and my son exchanging gifts, but I wish she would leave the rest of his family alone.

TOO MANY GIFTS

DEAR TOO MANY: Ask your son to tell the young lady that he appreciates her thoughtfulness and generosity but prefers that she discontinue the gift-giving to the members of his family. And if that doesn't do the trick, send her thank-you cards for the gifts, and let it go at that.

DEAR ABBY: This message is for Ed who for 31 years has been saying things to his wife that might sound like insults to others but who insists he didn't mean them as such.

Ed, ole buddy, your technique is abundantly clear. For 31 years, you've been announcing to everyone within earshot that your awareness of your own inferiority compels you to belittle your wife so that your own lack of worth will be less conspicuous.

You poor jerk, you might just as well have worn a big zero on your forehead.

STONEHOUSE

STONEHOUSE TAKEN HOME

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — Four Scotland Yard detectives took British MP John Stonehouse and his secretary back to England today to face charges in connection with the theft of more than a quarter-million dollars.

Stonehouse, a former aviation minister, and Mrs. Sheila Buckley, his attractive 28-year-old secretary, began the 23-hour flight to London 2½ weeks after the Australian government ordered their extradition.

The return of Stonehouse to England ended a worldwide drama that began in September, 1974, when he disappeared from the Fountainebleau Hotel in Miami Beach.

Australian police arrested Stonehouse on Christmas Eve. He was freed on bail pending the outcome of an extradition hearing, but was detained again June 9 when he tried to board a flight for London.

Stonehouse faces 21 counts of forgery, fraud, theft and conspiracy. Mrs. Buckley, who flew from England earlier in the year to join her boss in Australia, faces six counts of theft and conspiracy.

Cheese-Fingered Thief

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Financier John Bachan has learned the hard way that his doberman pinscher watchdog can be bought. He's a sucker for ham and cheese.

When Bachan and his wife got home from an evening out Tuesday they found their dog peacefully licking his chops. Missing were $80,000 worth of valuables, mostly jewelry.

Police said while the Bachans were gone, a burglar entered through a sliding glass door, went to the refrigerator for some ham and cheese, lured the dog into the bathroom with the goodies and then systematically looted the house.

LONDON — Actor Henry Fonda, now 70 and with a false forelock and an electric pacemaker regulating his heart, scored a personal triumph Wednesday night in his London debut after about half a century in show business.

Fonda received four curtain calls after appearing alone on stage for two hours in the play Clarence Darrow, the United States radical lawyer who championed the underdog and defended 102 accused murderers without losing one to execution.

EDMONTON — Harold Cardinal swept to his eight consecutive term as president of the Alberta Indian Association in the association's second province-wide elections.

The 30-year-old native of the Sucker Creek Reserve in northern Alberta polled 1,060 votes to 669 for John Samson, 61, a Hobbema, Alta., businessman.

LONDON — An author apologized in court Wednesday to his mother, who sued him for libel over his autobiography.

Archie Hill, 48, whose book A Cage of Shadows described how he and his 10 brothers and sisters were raised in the pre-war Depression, said he recognized that certain of his childhood memories were inaccurate.

Her lawyers said that because of serious allegations about her and the way she raised her children, "instead of being able to read A Cage of Shadows with pride in her son's achievement as an author, Mrs. Hill has suffered much distress and embarrassment by its publication."

OTTAWA — Michael Catliff, 47, of Vancouver has been appointed a judge of the County Court of Vancouver, the justice department announced Wednesday.

Catliff, admitted to the B.C. bar in 1956, practised law with the Vancouver firm of Douglas, Symes and Brissenden.

LONDON — The 32 members of the Shinn family in eastern England all want to live next door to each other — so they are building a housing estate for themselves in the village of Gelmsford.

Retired gardener George Shinn, 65, and his three sons, five daughters, their spouses and 14 grandchildren soon will move into eight new houses on an acre of land bought by Shinn.

"We will never have rows like other neighbors," Linda, 24, a daughter, said. "We all get on so well together."

HOLLYWOOD — Actor William Shatner broke his right ankle while filming an episode for the television series Barbary Coast. A horse stepped on his foot.

Paramount Studios said the incident is expected to keep him off his feet for about two weeks. Shatner formerly starred in the Star Trek TV series.

SPOKANE, Wash. — A murder trial was recessed in superior court when defence attorney Sid Wurzburg told the judge the zipper on his pants was stuck.

HOT GUITAR PLAYED DEADLY BEAT

ACTON, Maine (UPI) — A man playing an electric guitar was electrocuted when his bare feet apparently touched water, officials said Wednesday.

Dale Stilphen, 36, of Cherry Hill, N.J., died at his mother's summer cottage. The body was discovered in a wet area near an open door, they added.

Medical examiners said death was by electrocution.

GARDENING

When to Nip the Squash Vine

In our small vegetable garden there are four different kinds of squash, a total of fourteen plants. These are the envy of some of our friends who say they have no room for growing the trailing varieties they prefer.

Admittedly, some of ours are the bush types, which are not the type liked by all gardeners. The older trailing kinds are still considered best for flavor and texture in many quarters.

Apparently, the method of growing the trailing types in a limited space is not widely known, although it appeared in books printed nearly a hundred years ago.

It is still practiced in market gardens operated on the intensive principle, where every square foot of ground must produce the maximum of saleable products, and by gardeners in England who find it necessary to grow their tomatoes and marrows under the Chase Portable Cloches.

These cloches are about 18 inches wide and 24 inches long. One marrow plant is covered by two cloches and limited to an area 18 by 48 inches. This plant produces from four to eight marrows.

The method used may have been worked out by some observant gardener, or the result of an accident that damaged one of the trailing vines. Either way, it is common knowledge that long vines are late in producing female flowers and that these flowers are a long way from the roots, their source of food.

When the first fruit has set, it tends to take the majority of the food travelling along the vine and delays the development of those beyond it. For this reason it is recommended that first fruits should always be removed while young, as soon as they reach a usuable size.

Some authorities advise nipping when the vine has reached six feet in length, others when six leaves have formed, but if two or three fruits to a vine are sufficient it can be done after the third leaf.

Lateral growths then develop from the axis of each leaf, and the four best are selected. Others, if any, are removed. These laterals quickly produce flowers and fruits, two fruits being the limit on each lateral. The growing tip of each lateral is nipped out at one or two leaves beyond the last fruit.

If all goes well we have four laterals and eight fruits to each plant. The new growths that come from the base of the two leaves at the end of each lateral are nipped after two leaves have formed.

The reason for this continued nipping as explained in an earlier column, is to maintain a growing point beyond the fruit to draw food along the lateral. If there is no growing point the fruit fails to develop.

The result of all these shenanigans is female flowers much ealier than on the long vines, a better set of fruit, and much quicker development because the fruits are closer to the roots and less food is being diverted to make unneeded long growths.

If this method is new to you, try it on a plant that has not, as yet, made too long a vine, and compare results with the rest of the planting. You should have earlier and better fruits from less space.

Natural Gas Crunch to Hit Industrial Users This Year

Times Ottawa Bureau

And the federal government has decided to restrain future domestic growth in gas demand and to curtail some gas exports to the U.S., at least until Arctic gas supplies become available in the 1980s.

But the government has not yet decided exactly how much and when exports of gas will be cut-back.

Nor has it decided generally how much of a shortage Canadians will be expected to absorb, compared to U.S. users of Canadian gas, and how the shortage will be shared domestically.

Despite the generally vague government plans for domestic and export curtailments, at least a few things have been decided:

—Canadians using gas to heat their homes, cook their food and heat their water won't have to worry about any shortages. Residential customers, even in the event of a major shortage, will be given high priority for the supplies available.

—American export customers will be hit the hardest even under the Canadian government's "share the shortage" concept, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald indicated Wednesday after releasing the National Energy Board gas report and the government's reaction to it.

—Export customers and domestic industrial customers with alternative energy sources will be asked during the coming months to switch to alternative fuels to ease the pressures on Canada's dwindling supplies of conventional national gas. Power utilities using gas to produce electricity will also be included.

—While all exports will not be eliminated, even over the longer run, the government does intend to modify existing export licenses to limit exports so that "approved" Canadian requirements are met fully first.

The government has not yet defined who will be "approved" Canadian users.

This and many other question marks about the government's future gas supply policy are to be determined only after consultation with the provinces, with the United States, and with the National Energy Board, according to Macdonald. The consultation is expected to take at least six months.

Defending the government's "share the shortage" approach, Macdonald noted that the gas situation for U.S. customers is somewhat different from the oil export situation, in which Canada has decided to phase-out all exports by the mid-1980s.

Comox Family Killed In U.S. Crash

The Totten's car was leaving the highway about one quarter of a mile west of Gig Harbor when it was hit in the rear by a truck.

All Pubs to Get Supply of Beer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Limited quantities of draught beer will be distributed in all areas of British Columbia as soon as technical details of an arrangement worked out this week are completed, a brewery workers union spokesman said today.

Ed Glasser said in an interview earlier statements by B.C. Hotels Association president Louis Valente that four of the province's 17 liquor distribution zones would be excluded from the arrangement because of union problems are incorrect.

Draught supplies to beer parlors dependent on Molson's beer have dried up because of a strike by Brewery Workers' Union, Local 300, members at Molson's plants, now in its seventh week.

Under the arrangement, hotels serving other brands have agreed to release up to 10 per cent of their draught beer allocation to beer parlors dependent on Molson's beer.

Valente said Monday the four areas to have been excluded — the Lower Mainland, Nanaimo, Kelowna and Kamloops—were cut off because of a labor dispute between brewery workers and firms which truck beer from breweries to hotels.

Officials Fired

REGINA (CP) — Industry Minister John Messer announced today that two top officials of the Saskatchewan Power Corp. (SPC) have been fired for failing to report a mistake that will cost the province several million dollars.

Mr. Messer said that SPC General-Manager Reith and the manager of the gas system, Bill Reed, did not tell the corporation's board of directors for nine months about a failure to negotiate higher prices for natural gas supplied to an unidentified major industrial customer under a long-term contract.

The minister said that under the contract, the SPC could renegotiate for higher prices every two years if proper notice was given.

"In January of 1974, SPC failed to give the proper notice so that the corporation lost the right to obtain higher prices for gas it sells to that customer for the two-year period November, 1974, to October of 1976." Mr. Messer said.

"The failure of the corporation to ensure that proper steps were taken to renegotiate was a serious matter in itself. As a result, the corporation and indirectly the people of Saskatchewan stand to lose several millions of dollars over the two-year period."

RAISE CURB LAW HURTS U.K. MPs

LONDON (Reuter) — Members of Parliament became the first victims of the labor government's crackdown on inflation Wednesday, and many of them did not like it.

There were shouts of "disgraceful" from members in the House of Commons when the government announced they would get less than half the salary increase recommended by an independent inquiry.

The members, who earn £4,500 ($10,350) annually, have not not had a salary increase in more than three years. During this time prices have gone up by about 80 per cent.

The inquiry committee had suggested that Commons members should get a raise of £3,500 ($8,050) a year, but the government announced Wednesday an increase of £1,250 ($2,875).

SLIM COMFORT FOR U.S. BUYERS

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Reduction of Canadian natural gas exports will aggravate shortages in the coming winter caused by dwindling domestic supplies, but U.S. officials were slightly comforted by the sympathetic tone of the policy announced Wednesday by Energy Minister Donald Macdonald.

"It is clear they (Ottawa) know our problems and are keeping them in mind," said one official in the state department.

Macdonald promised to hold talks with the Americans about implementation of export reductions and the possibility of giving preferential treatment to areas of the U.S. which are most-dependent upon Canadian gas supplies.

The fact that Macdonald delayed a decision on the exact amount of the reductions was also welcome.

But it is felt that there is at least some hope of mitigating the impact in the talks promised by Macdonald.

VANCOUVER—Crown Zellerbach Ltd. reports its net earnings for the first six months of 1975 were $9 million, a drop of 24.3 per cent from the $11.9 million reported in the corresponding period of 1974.

Net earnings in the second quarter were $6.2 million or 77 cents a share, compared with earnings of $6.5 million or 81 cents a share for the same period last year, the company said in a news release.

Fish Offer Cut Back

The Fishermen's Market at 1610 Island Highway has been swamped with customers since it began selling old age pensioners fish at wholesale prices last Friday.

To help control the situation, Mrs. Germaine Sutherland says she will have to limit the offer to Thursdays, beginning next week.

But instead of closing at 6 p.m. the store will be offering the deal to pensioners from noon to 9 p.m.

Mrs. Sutherland, who has had 10 on staff to help cope with the numbers who flocked to take advantage of her offer, says she will continue with her project in spite of the problems.

"We have to help those who need it and some pensioners are starving because they can't pay high prices," she said, "We must give a hand, that's what it's all about."

She said the store sold four truckloads at wholesale prices in one day, pink salmon going for 59 cents a pound, ling cod for 49 cents a pound and turbot for 89 cents a pound.

Because she gets the fish daily from her husband, Larry, a Sooke fish buyer, Mrs. Sutherland says she is able to sell the fish to the pensioners for less than the retailers pay.

Arab Move Seen as End of UN

Special to the Times

UNITED NATIONS — There is growing concern among UN officials and diplomats here as they prepare for the fall session that an Arab-led move to suspend Israel could bring the end of the United Nations as it is now known.

The officials and diplomats envision votes on the floor of the General Assembly leading to a suspension of Israeli participation, a walkout by the U.S. delegation, a cutoff of UN funds by the U.S. Congress and perhaps similar fund cuts by western European nations.

"For the first time," an American diplomat said, "I can visualize the destruction of the UN as we know it — its transformation into the Third World Congress."

Aside from the damage to the United Nations as an institution, many diplomats fear that such a a move would destroy prospects of resuming negotiations in the Middle East. This poses a threat to the Arab moderates but would be in itself a victory for the Arab radicals who oppose negotiation.

U.S. Secretary of State Kissinger indicated in a speech Monday that a drive to expel member nations would encourage the United States "simple to depart the scene."

The concept of a U.S. walkout if Israel were suspended by the Assembly was advocated by Daniel Patrick Moynihan at his Senate confirmation hearing for the job of U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

There have been rumblings from Congress that a move to expel Israel would provoke a cutoff of U.S. funds for the United Nations — which amounts to 25 per cent of the UN budget.

If the United States were to walk out, British Ambassador Ivor Richard has said, "I think it would be the end of the UN"

The move would be "an awful setback to Israel," in the words of Israel's minister in Washington, Mordechai Shalev.

Western diplomats had hoped that a successful conclusion of negotiations on an interim Egyptian-Israeli agreement would ease Arab pressure for a confrontation at the Assembly. "But now it looks more and more likely that the Syrians will press the issue here, even if there is an agreement in the Sinai," one high ranking UN official said.

The Syrian position is that a drive against Israel will depend on whether there is progress toward a further Israeli pullback in the Golan Heights — something the Israelis rule out.

The drive to isolate Israel diplomatically emerged after the October 1973 war as an Arab policy alternative to warfare or negotiation."

With their new-found support in Africa and Europe, and their potent oil weapon, the Arabs found themselves with a reliable majority in most international forums.

They tested it in the Assembly last year, when they limited Israel's right to speak in the Palestine debate. They limited Israeli participation in the UN Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization.

This year, they had the World Health Organization condemn Israel, and passed resolutions against "Zionism" at the International Women's Year Conference in Mexico City.

An alternative to the suspension of Israel is further negotiations. Even the Syrians profess to prefer that alternative. They look to American efforts to achieve progress in piecemeal fashion, or, if all else fails, to a reconvening of the Geneva conference.

In the view of most diplomats, therefore, the Arabs, are likely to delay an all-out diplomatic drive against Israel until they perceive that the United States is either unable or unwilling to bring about the necessary Israeli negotiating concessions.

"Right now," said an Arab ambassador here, "We pursue negotiations. If they fail, then the other: it (alternative) is no problem"

Algerian Ambassador Abd Ellatif Rahal has insisted that the non-aligned nations are not yet committed to pursuing the suspension of Israel, but he warned that the United States could not prevent such a non-aligned drive — it could only avert the move by getting Israel to respect UN resolutions.

Demolition Likely Fate For Oak Bay Monastery

Cloistered halls of a landmark Oak Bay monastery will soon tumble under wecker's machines to prevent the empty shell from becoming a public hazard.

The property adjoining St. Patrick's Church at 2060 Haultain is the 63-year-old chapel and monastery of the Sisters of St. Clare, a sequestered, contemplative order of nuns who made it their silent home for 61 years.

The permit is likely to be granted.

Ecumenism and a changing world led to sale of the structure three years ago to St. Patrick's, and the order has re-established at Duncan.

Rev. Joseph Jackson, of St. Patrick's, said it has since become a firetrap.

The safety risk to the adjoining church and neighborhood is too great, he said, and the decision to tear it down was reached reluctantly.

For two years the parish tried to find ways of saving the building for alternative use, but, said Jackson, "literally hundreds of thousands" would have to be spent on it to bring it to acceptable standards.

Jackson said no new development for the site is proposed. Eventually, it is hoped the property will be developed as a church hall.

The Poor Clares, so-called because of their vows of poverty, reliance on charity and renunciation of worldly things, had the monastery built in 1911-12, when the surrounding area was virtually all farmland, except for the race track and exhibition buildings of Willows fairgrounds just over the rise at the foot of Haultain.

Their special, spiritual vocation required the sisters to live an unnatural but serene life, spending much of their waking hours in prayer, doing their communal chores and such work for the church as making of vestments. Even their vegetable garden was behind a high wall, unseen by outsiders.

The quiet has been described as "either restful or appalling, depending on the point of view."

Changes in the church brought about by Pope John XXIII saw many of the barriers between the Poor Clares and the community broken down: the nuns were allowed more freedom of movement, they could read newspapers, watch TV and receive visitors without being screened behind a curtained, steel grille.

There is also more freedom in prayers, but the Poor Clares are still a meditative order despite their more active, visible role in the church community.

ICBC, Union Talk

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fred Trotter, the spokesman for the 1,800 members of the Office and Technical Employees Union on strike against the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia, said his union met for seven hours yesterday with the corporation in an attempt to end the nine-week walkout.

Except for a 12-minute meeting Tuesday, it was the first time since July 3 that the two sides have come together for talks.

Trotter did not give any indication of whether progress was made towards resolving the dispute, but he did say that ICBC has reversed its stance about demanding that the union join it in applying for an industrial inquiry commission.

Trotter also said he has asked the organizers of a motorcade planned for today to call off the protest as a show of good faith in the talks.

The union struck ICBC 65 days ago. The workers are seeking a first contract which would give wage parity with B.C. Hydro employees whose average salaries are about 40 per cent higher.

The corporation has offered a wage increase of 14 per cent and two cost-of-living adjustments in a contract from Jan. 1, 1975, to Aug. 31, 1976.

Villa Deal Was 'Clean'

MONTREAL (CP) — The president of Air Canada learned the airline's vice-president of marketing had purchased a villa in Barbados about a year before the latter resigned over the transaction, an inquiry into Air Canada's financial operations was told Wednesday.

Yves Menard resigned in February, 1975, after news of his purchase of a villa in the Sunset Crest development in Barbados was published.

"I didn't consider there was a legal conflict of interest," Vaughan, a member of the Nova Scotia bar, told the inquiry.

Vaughan said he thought the purchase arrangements included no special considerations or reduced prices which might constitute a conflict of interest in light of the airline's participation in the Sunset Crest development.

The Air Canada president added he recalled informing the airline's chairman, Yves Pratte, about the purchase but said they decided at the time that no action was necessary.

Vaughan said he was inspecting Air Canada interests in Barbados Feb. 27, 1975, when he received a call from Pratte informing him that rental payments on the Menard villa "had been received but not applied against the mortgage" by the Sunset Crest developers.

Vaughan said he then became worried about a potential conflict of interest and adopted the view that "he (Menard) should resign."

Vaughan added that by the time he returned from the Barbados on Feb. 30, Menard had resigned "and the matter was concluded."

Vaughan also said under questioning from inquiry commissioner Justice Willard Estey that the airline had entered into the Sunset Crest condominium lease before the matter had been brought before the airline's board of directors for approval.

The Sunset Crest lease, the Air Canada president said, incurred a loss to the airline of about $600,000 in 1974 alone.

The airline, the inquiry has already been told, has decided not to exercise its renewal option on the apartments when the lease expires at the end of 1975.

Cain Makes Short Break

A handcuffed Danny Cain broke free from two sheriffs today and spent nearly half an hour free in Victoria's Inner Harbor area before he was recaptured hiding under a bed in a waterfront hotel.

Cain, 19, was being put onto an Airwest Airlines seaplane flight to be taken to the B.C. Penitentiary in New Westminster when he made his break at about 11:30 a.m.

The fugitive fled west along Belleville.

A police dragnet was thrown up immediately but was hampered by hordes of milling tourists.

As policemen ran around the hotel, searching each floor, including the basement, she noticed that a security lock on one of the doors on the first floor was pushed out.

He offered no resistance.

Witness said Cain ran through the front door of the hotel and disappeared until the security lock was noticed.

At one stage in their frantic hunt police believed Cain had made it to the Parliament Buildings and was hiding inside — possibly in a tunnel connecting the Douglas Building to the main block.

Space Link A Success

HOUSTON (UPI) — Three Americans and two Russians docked in orbit today and, after a brief scare from a burning smell, went ahead with plans to transfer crews in history's first meeting of men from two nations in space.

The acrid smell was first noticed when a hatch was opened between the American Apollo cabin and the docking module linking the craft to the Soviet Soyuz.

Houston control ordered Thomas Stafford, Vance Brand and Donald "Deke" Slayton to put on oxygen masks when the problem was first noticed. But later, the concern of controllers in Houston eased and the astronauts were told there probably wasn't any trouble.

Cosmonauts Alexei Leonov and Valeri Kubasov calmly waited in their Soyuz during the excitement, reporting to their control centre in Moscow that all was normal aboard the Russian craft.

"We think probably the most likely explanation is we've had the docking module locked up for four and a half hours and the smell just built up a little bit," ground communicator Richard Truly told the Americans.

"We don't expect any problem, we'll let you know."

The astronauts apparently never did put the oxygen masks on, but Stafford said the masks were at their sides, ready for use if necessary.

The Americans said the smell resembled burning glue or acetone.

"I'm just standing by here to see if I feel any different, but I still feel pretty good," Slayton told concerned ground controllers fearing that there was a possibility that gases might overcome the pilots. "I still feel pretty good. I'm not used to sniffing glue."

A few minutes later, Slayton reported he had entered the docking module and everything was still okay: "No health problems."

The docking itself went very smoothly and Stafford exclaimed, "we have succeeded."

"We are looking forward to shaking hands with you aboard Soyuz," Leonov said.

Even MPs Can't Be Trusted

Not yet, but restaurant manager Bill Pentecost is trying to prevent funny money from being passed there.

Pentecost has issued a memo to staff instructing that they are not to accept $50 or $100 bills. Any MPs, senators, senior officials and reporters who have access to the restaurant and insist on using the big bills will have to sign them, says the memo.

The issue was raised in the Commons when Bill Clarke (PC — Vancouver - Quadra) asked Finance Minister John Turner to consider new bills to replace the present $50 and $100 bills that counterfeiters apparently find easy to copy.

Many stores now refuse to accept the bills because of the high incidence of forgeries.

Turner said he will look into the possibility.

Mideast Accord Near?

Times News Services

TEL AVIV — Egypt and Israel have reached agreement on the general principles for a new interim peace accord, an Israeli government source said today.

Despite Egypt's threat to oust UN troops from the Sinai desert, negotiations on an interim accord could succeed, "if things are played right," the source added.

"The general principles are agreed," he said. "The principle on which the next agreement would be based are understood."

However, he cautioned that an Arab move to expel Israel from the United Nations could hinder the talks. (See also page 40)

"This would make the negotiations more difficult," he said. "But we will continue the negotiations."

The foreign ministers of 40 Islamic nations voted at a conference this week in Jidda, Saudi Arabia, to seek Israel's expulsion from the United Nations and other international organizations.

The Israeli source said it was too early to predict if such a move would succeed, but said if it did it would affect the operation of UN peace-keeping forces in the Middle East.

United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, meanwhile, held out hope that the UN peace-keeping forces in the Siani will be permitted to continue operations despite Egyptian unwillingness.

Officials at the United Nations and in the U.S. government took the view that Egypt had not closed the door on an extension of the force beyond the July 24 deadline but was instead trying to press for progress toward a settlement.

INDIANS GIVEN ULTIMATUM

Blockade Must Go

The attorney-general's department today issued ultimatums to two native Indian bands that their road blockades must be dismantled or there will be no negotiation of Indian demands.

In the case of a roadblock in the Mount Currie area near Pemberton, a letter to the Indian band states that "steps would be taken to have it removed" if the roadblock is not taken down forthwith.

Deputy attorney-general David Vickers today released the letter, sent to Mount Currie Indian Band Chief Al Stager. Vickers declined to elaborate what nature the "steps" would be taken.

Indications are that two representatives from the lands department and highways department are on their way to the site to discuss the matter.

Vickers said he hopes native Indians there will agree to remove the blockade — blocking the road to a pulp mill and the wharf — on the undertaking that the provincial government will negotiate with them.

RCMP were given orders Tuesday to remove the roadblock but the order was rescinded after Vickers learned that the Indians had repositioned the barricade to a site where ownership of the land is in dispute.

Vickers said the government is investigating to see whether the 1.91 acre site is on public land or Indian land as the Indians claim.

Meanwhile, the letter issued to the Mount Currie chief July 15 says that: "The attorney-general has a paramount law enforcement responsibility to protect people and property. The situation at Mount Currie requires immediate action."

It also says the attorney-general will immediately discuss with the department of highways the situation relating to the road at Mount Currie.

He will request that an immediate survey be taken and also improvements made, as might be required, to meet the present situation.

Vickers said the letter was sent to confirm a conversation he had Saturday with the chief's wife Verna Stager.

Mary Williams, a spokesman for the Mount Currie band, said today she doubts whether the blockade will be removed.

"We're just getting so damned fed up . . .," she said. "Nobody really cares."

Williams said some of the people manning the roadblock have guns, but they've been told not to use them.

The blockade of the Mount Currie-Lillooet Road began in late June as a protest over seizure by federal officials of food fishing nets.

Williams said the band also feels it was never properly compensated by the government for loss of reserve land to build the road.

She said non-Indians in the area are very hostile about the blockade.

In Gold River RCMP continue to keep an uneasy peace while the blockade between the town and the Muchalat Inlet enters its fourth day.

Staff Sgt. Robert Cruikshank said he understood deputy highways minister Howard Sturrock and B.C. director of lands George Wilson would be coming up to negotiate.

The Pub Staff Was Cut Off

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Five employees of the Empress Hotel's Beaver pub who say they were fired for refusing to serve a customer they had earlier barred, plan to picket outside the pub later today.

Three of the employees, Bill Harris, Susan Krappell and Maryann Campbell, were fired Tuesday night and the other two, Dawn Zowtuk and Christie Heron, were fired Wednesday, after they refused an order from the hotel's general manager to serve a young pub customer.

The fire had barred the customer two weeks ago, they said, after several months of harassment. They said they had cut the customer off several times for drinking too much and had already thrown him out of the pub three times.

"We're responsible for keeping order in the pub," Campbell said Tuesday. "When somebody drinks too much we cut him off and if there is consistently bad behaviour, we bar them."

The real issue, she said, is why the management chose to back the customer over the staff.

Harris, who alternates between bartender and waiter in the pub, said the customer was consistently rude to the waitresses, "treated them like dirt and would swear at them."

"If someone persists in the harassment of staff, then it's an unwritten law that you bar him. We were just trying to keep some order in the bar."

All five of the fired employees feel they were doing their jobs when they barred the customer.

"If you never cut anyone off, it would turn into a slop house, the bar would go completely to pieces and you'd probably get fired for not doing your job," Harris said.

The real problem started about two weeks ago Harris said, when during a busy night at the pub, the young customer had, in their opinion, had too much to drink and was harassing his waitress, Dawn Zowtuk.

Zowtuk cut him off, but the young man went to the front office of the hotel to complain. He came back to the pub with two of the managers, but the employees told their side of the story to the managers and got their support, Harris said.

The young customer however, stayed in the bar and continued his harassment of the employees and the decision was made to bar him.

2 Police Wounded In Edmonton Siege

EDMONTON (CP) — A 31-year-old Edmonton man surrendered late Wednesday after one policeman was wounded and another grazed by a bullet during an eight-hour siege that drew hundreds of curious spectators to an apartment block in the city's west end.

Samuel James Wood was charged with two counts of attempted murder and one of armed robbery following an afternoon bank holdup that led to the standoff.

Two other men who surrendered to police almost four hours earlier also were charged with attempted murder.

They were identified as Robert Joseph Lemaire, 38, of Edmonton, and Douglas Raymond Coumont, 24, who lived in the apartment building where the gunman was holed up.

At about 2:10 p.m., a man armed with a rifle escaped with about $1,400 from a branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia in a small west-end shopping centre.

Witnesses spotted the man running across the parking lot and entering a building in a nearby row of walkup apartments.

Two city police detectives were the first to arrive at the building. A door-to-door search led to a third-floor suite occupied by two men.

Going through the rooms, one detective was shot twice from behind a shower curtain in the bathroom.

A shout for help was answered by a nurse living in a second-floor suite. She attended the wounded policeman who was later lowered through a window to a waiting ambulance.

Prince Bombed

NAHA, Okinawa (AP) — Two young radicals hufled gasoline bombs at Japan's crown prince and princess on Okinawa today while in Tokyo hundreds of feuding radicals fough teach other at a railway station, leaving one dead.

Crown Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko escaped injury in the attack shortly after arriving on a controversial three-day trip to Okinawa. One of the prince's aides was slightly injured when the two radicals jumped out of an underground tomb surrounded by trees and hurled the bombs, police said. One landed near the prince's foot and burst into flames.

Hostage Negotiation—New Police Course

By DEREK SIDENIUS

RCMP throughout B.C. will receive instruction in hostage negotiation as part of their regular training starting this fall, the Times has learned.

Sgt. Rodger Post, Victoria headquarters training officer, said in an interview Wednesday it is hoped the program will give RCMP officers a better insight into situations involving everything from domestic crises to international terrorism.

"We've had some sessions on crisis intervention over the past two years but now we're hoping to upgrade them," he said.

Post was one of 22 law enforcement officers, educators and officials from across the United States and Canada, and the only RCMP member, who attended the week-long Crisis Intervention Hostage Negotiation seminar in Toronto last month.

The seminar, sponsored by the International Association of Chiefs of Police, was prepared in the face of an increase in hostage-taking in North America, particularly in the U.S.

Post stressed, however, that in Canada, the emphasis will be on domestic situations.

"Fortunately, we haven't been involved to any great degree with hostage incidents in this country," he said.

But, he added, there was a high percentage here of "plain, out-and-out family fights where a family member is in effect a hostage, held by a knife or some other household weapon.

"It is something the public is rarely aware of, yet it is fairly common."

Post said the idea behind the upgraded training program was to change the policeman's image from "fastest gun in town" or man on patrol to that of "law enforcement therapist."

By therapist he means instilling in the officer an understanding not only of the psychological factors involved in crisis situations but also of the techniques that should be used to restore peace.

He said there can be no set policy as to how police should handle any given situation.

Beyond determining the criminal's reason for taking the hostage and what he might want in exchange, the situation demands the technique and not the other way around.

Although hostage-taking is not common in Canada, Post noted, it is becoming increasingly so in the U.S.

In New York City, for example, the police force has a 68-member hostage negotiation team. During 1974, the team acted on slightly more than 400 incidents and were successful in having hostages released alive and without serious injury in every case.

Post attributed the hostage-taking problem to the impact of the media and growth of extremism and militancy.

He did not feel extremism was necessarily applicable to Canada but the media — "that's the greatest source of ideas of would-be perpetrators.

"They see the news, read it or hear it . . . and the more widespread it is, the more people start getting ideas."

Museum 'Clutter' Disturbing Staff

Some members of the Provinical Museum staff are upset by the "clutter" gathering in and around the museum and the museum director is angry they have made it a public issue.

A statement on museum letterhead and signed "the British Columbia Provincial Museum staff" was mailed to the Times and decries "the carnival atmosphere" developing at the museum.

"It's an in-house matter and I have no comment on it," director Yorke Edwards snapped when asked about it today.

The statement says the museum is justly gaining a reputation throughout North America for its concepts and the quality in its planned and completed exhibits.

A capable staff of curators and technicians has been transformed into a team of professionals and "to surround these people and this institution with a carnival atmosphere is to downgrade both their efforts and the dignity of the museum," the statement says.

dignity of the museum," the statement says.

"Adjacent to the main entrance is a booth plastered with posters and pushing lottery tickets. Across from the director's office windows stands a portable stage that looks like the setting for a PNE sideshow rather than a symphony orchestra.

"Visitors can no longer lounge in the planter area without the guilt of having to purchase something," the statement says.

"A Coca-Cola machine abuts the Glass House near the breezeway in jarring contrast to the weathered Indian artifacts."

The statement says there have been suggestions that the people who created the exhibits within the museum should have a voice on use of the grounds.

It proposes that suggestion be carried one step further and they should be actively involved in proposals, planning and execution to bring the exterior of the museum up to the quality "that the thinking public expects of a provincial museum."

When a War of Long Ago Haunts a Happy Marriage

Sometimes I have this nightmare, see? I'm in the witness box of an enormous courtroom. The judge is bending down over me from about 40 feet up, a fierce, pink-faced man with a real crazy white wig.

I hear his question thundering and echoing. "What are the grounds for divorce, witness?" And then I can hear myself answering. My voice is a little tin flute. "Well, m'lord, my wife was a foreman in a war plant . . ."

Even awake I've been having some long, tortured thoughts about divorce and superior women, the Rosemary Browns of the world, and stuff like that since my wife and I started remodelling the upstairs.

If we'd just got those splendid chaps who did the downstairs, life would still be sweet. We might look forward to another 50 or 60 years of contented matrimony, teetering down life's highway, arm-in-arm and with a merry song on our lips. But, no. Let us finish the upstairs bedrooms ourselves, my wife said. Before I knew it I was up to my clavicle in 40,000 board feet of PV Woodgrain, or whatever it's called. And we were fighting like wild animals.

It is not only disgusting. It's downright dangerous. A man can take just so much and if, having taken so much, he happens to be holding in his hand a well-balanced claw-hammer the consequences are apt to be dire, not to mention homicidal.

That creeps into my nightmares, too. I hear myself saying, "I cannot tell a lie m'lord. I destoyed her with my little claw-hammer."

In some ways the situation parallels that of a couple we know who came to a legal parting of the ways for no other reason than that the wife was the intellectual superior of the husband — or, at least, fancied she was — and became incapable of letting him forget it for more than 11 seconds.

After 15-odd years of constant reminders that he was a bird-brain, the man suddenly went berserk, ran off with a cute little waitress with a high bosom and a low I.Q. and gives every appearance of living happily ever after. The new wife keeps saying, "You're so right, Daddy," and that brings the roses to his cheeks.

My wife and I pitied both the original wife and the husband in their conflict, little dreaming that our own fate might be determined in a similar way by finishing the upstairs bedrooms, a project that's brought togetherness to the point of the Indian death-lock.

Trouble is that my wife really was a foreman during the war or, at any rate a squad leader or a charge hand or some other unlikely position of command and authority.

At various times while I was overseas bringing down Adolf Hitler, quite a lot of it in the borough of Chelsea, and making the world safe for the Germans and Japanese, my wife was building ship's pantries and range-finders and echo-sounders and all sorts of other things. She even made stove-pipes, roof-jacks and air conditioning units which, for reasons that have persistently escaped me, had something to do with the war-effort. God knows how we'd have won without those roof-jacks, whatever they may be.

But I mustn't get bitter. It is just that when we go up those stairs for an evening of joinery it's as if the war has started up again.

She is like those types such as my friend Macpherson who managed to become sergeants during the last unpleasantness by some freak of chance, have never got over the taste of power and are always looking for a chance to bark out some word of command.

All I have to do is stand there with my little claw-hammer in my hand and my wife starts crisply issuing orders. Her whole past seems to rise up before her. She's incapable of not reverting to rank.

You wouldn't believe the scorn and contempt that greets my simple, basic approach to carpentry. My reliance, for example, on the adroit use of molding to cover up any slight mistake — I often use molding on molding and may, in fact, be a pioneer in this technique — drives her to a frenzy of authoritarianism.

No femme fatale could come between us, mind you. But an overlap of as little as two inches of PV Woodgrain, easily covered by the giant-sized molding I favor, is enough to cause her to launch into criticisms beyond the happiest marriage's point of no return. That is the point we're at now. The rest may be court history.

All Sooke All Set

Rolling, chopping and splicing toward Canadian championships, about 30 loggers will battle for prizes at this year's All-Sooke Day on Saturday.

Loggers will come from as far as New Zealand and Australia for contests including national finals in log-rolling, springboard chop and team loggers' relay of wood chopping and cable splicing.

After a 10 a.m. parade from the Sooke shopping plaza, a salmon and beef barbecue will start about noon at the Sooke flats, and children's events will follow.

The barbecue will feature 1,000 pounds of salmon and 500 pounds of beef, director Jack Keating said today.

All-Sooke Day began as a community picnic in 1933 when fish canners J. H. Todd and Son Ltd., operated the old fish traps in the area and a fish feast was a natural focus for the picnic, he added.

Aldermen Snub Rub Offer

But Yield to Knead for Massage Parlor

★ ★ ★

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

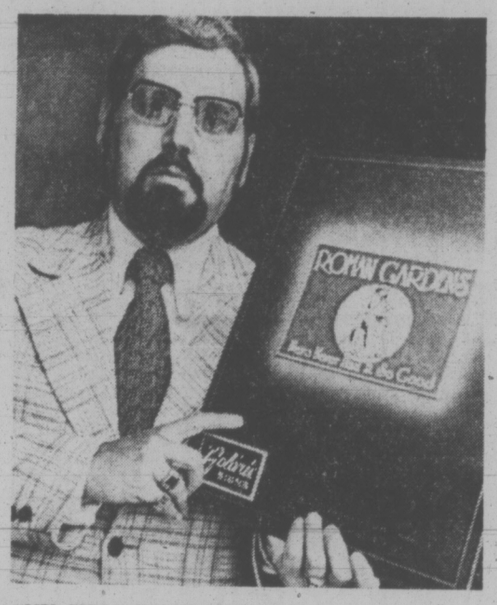
Richmond entrepreneur William Gold, who wants to offer Victoria's tired businessmen "relaxing body rubs," today kneaded city aldermen's opinion into a favorable recommendation for a trades licence.

But finance committee members politely declined Gold's invitation that they submit aldermanic limbs to the manipulations of his wife, who also attended the meeting.

When he said she would be "more than happy to demonstrate" her technique on the spot, aldermen looked at each other for a moment in some embarrassment.

Then committee chairman Ald. Sam Bawlf replied that he didn't consider that an appropriate place or time for a massage.

Of the four aldermen present — Mayor Peter Pollen didn't attend — only Ald. Clyde Savage was opposed to granting a trades licence for the proposed Victoria operation, which is to be called The Roman Gardens.



"MY GIRLS WEAR MORE than your wives would wear on the beach," William Gold told aldermen. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Savage said Gold seems "a nice enough chap," but if he were allowed to set up such an establishment other less reputable persons might follow suit and there would be the potential for "the types of things this city can do without."

He also criticized Gold for running a picture of a nude in a Georgia Straight advertisement for his Richmond leisure club.

"To advertise nude women and then say we don't have nude women is dishonest practice," he commented.

When Ellis earlier questioned Gold about the ad., with its implications that body rubs were performed by nude or topless women, Gold replied that his "opposition" had resorted to similar advertising and he had to compete.

But he gave assurances that he was not interested in running "a house of ill repute," and produced letters from the Richmond health and licence inspectors indicating there had been no complaints or problems in that municipality.

"To quote the Richmond Review, there is no hanky-panky going on because it can't — the walls are paper-thin" and stop two feet short of the ceiling, he said.

As for dress, Gold assured the aldermen that "my girls wear more than your wives would wear on the beach." Originally they were clad in harem-type costumes but now they are dressed in "hostess gowns," he explained.

City manager Jim Bramley said a message to the committee from Ald. Bill Tindall indicated that B.C.'s massage parlors were the subject of a report to the attorney-general's department by the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit.

Notwithstanding that, Ellis moved the application for the licence be approved "in the absence of any information of illegal conduct."

Ald. Malcolm Anderson also favored approval, saying it wasn't up to city council to "police the morals of the community," while Bawlf said he didn't consider the city had sufficient grounds to refuse a licence in this case.

But Bawlf said it should be a matter for public concern that various undesirable activities can be pursued in B.C. outside of the legislation governing massage practitioners.

Hopefully the report to the attorney-general would result in tighter legislation regulating such activities, he said.

A letter to the committee from local massage practitioner Gibson Brown complained that the "so-called body rub places" hurt the reputation of legitimate practitioners, by creating such a bad image that respectable people shun the entire field.

"I often get phone calls from men who are from out of town (usually Toronto) wanting to get a massage," Brown stated. "When they find I have no girls to do it they suddenly become not interested."

Tourists Are Pinching Pennies

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria's tourist flow is higher this summer than last year — but visitors are spending less.

Don Nixon, manager of the Visitor Information Centre, said the recession has made tourists more careful in their spending patterns.

"They seem to be spending the absolute minimum. They need a bed and a meal but after that they are being very careful. They are buying fewer gifts and other retail goods and going to fewer attractions. They also seems to be going for lower-priced meals."

As a result, the total tourist spending in the Victoria area will probably just match the $137 million spent here last year, despite the higher number of visitors in 1975.

The flow of visitors arriving on B.C. Ferries is up 5 per cent from last year. Traffic on the Marguerite is up in July after a slow start in June.

Last year the Marguerite brought in an average of 1,000 visitors a day during July but this July is running at about 1,100 per day, up 10 per cent. For example, there were 1,175 on Wednesday, 1,051 on Tuesday and last Saturday there were 1,458. Total passenger capacity is 2,000.

Most of the passengers appear to be over just for the day although some are using the five-day excursion rate.

The hotels and motels report a mixed trend. Some have a higher occupancy rate than last year while others are down and there is no clear geographic pattern. Most, however, are satisfied with the flow of tourists so far this season.

Some visitors have commented that hotel and motel rates are higher than in some cities south of the border, particularly in Washington and Oregon.

Nixon said Victoria hotel men are aware of this problem but feel they must charge fairly high rates because of the short tourist season here.

"If we had a well-developed convention business to attract visitors in the off-season, the rates in Victoria might be more competitive."

Merchants have noticed a shift in the travel routes of tourists, partly as a result of the disruption of Government Street. Some tourits arriving on Vancouver Island by car might not be going all the way downtown to the Causeway as a result of the detours.

The downtown Causeway bureau of the visitor Information Centre is handling tourist inquiries at the rate of about 500 per day. In addition, several hundred wander in to obtain informatin on a self-service basis but the bureau does not keep records on the number.

The satellite tourist booth beside the old fireball hall at Burnside and Douglas is handling between 100 and 200 inquiries per day from tourists.

Q. My husband and I had to feel sorry for the lieutenant-governor and his wife, having to shake hands with so many people at the Government House garden party this month. My husband says the late President Kennedy has the record for hand-shaking because he was so popular. Is he right? I've bet him he's wrong. P.D.

A. You win the bet although your husband is partially right. It is an American president that set the record. President Theodare Roosevelt shook hands with 8,513 people at a New Year's Day White House presentation in 1907—a feat that's yet to be equalled.

Food Co-op Prepares to Open

Victoria's first storefront co-operative food outlet should be open in a month in the old Purity store at Fernwood and Gladstone.

The vacant building at 2009 Fernwood has been leased by Springridge Housing Co-op whose members are among organizers of the food co-op which has not yet been named.

Food will be sold from the front of the building, said one organizer Kathleen Orton.

A first public meeting last week attracted 131, and a second meeting of organizers was held Wednesday night.

Customers will have to be members of the co-op and will be asked to work at the store on a voluntary basis.

Food will be purchased wholesale and a flat 10 per cent added to prices to cover building rental and other bills, she said.

She has been involved in other food co-ops and says members will probably save 20 per cent.

Potential members who attended the meeting included a cross-section of the community, said Fernwood Community Association worker Brian Lewis.

"There wasn't a predominance of freaks. There were young people, older people, men, women, Indians and whites," he said.

Victoria's only existing food co-op, Amor de Cosmos, does not sell goods straight from the shelf but requires advance orders on food items which are picked up later.

DETRAINING for the last time as conductor of the E and N Railway run from Parksville to Victoria is Ab Stenberg who retires today after 42 years with the railway. Born in Victoria, Stenberg started off in the train service department in 1933 and has been travelling the Island by train ever since. He lives with wife, Betty at 1127 McKenzie. (John McKay photo.)

Baseball Shows Attendance Jump

By CRAIG AMMERMAN
AP Sports Writer

Bucking economic bad times, major league baseball attendance is up about five per cent in 1975, a trend which would result in a record total of more than 31 million persons paying their way into the stadiums this season.

Perhaps because it's one of the cheapest forms of entertainment at a time when many cannot afford to travel far or spend much, baseball is enjoying a banner season. Fourteen teams show increased attendance figures at the all-star break, and three clubs have drawn more than a million paying customers.

An Associated Press survey found that the 24 clubs have attracted 16,817,710 persons paying their way into games this season, an increase of 4.8 per cent and 800,000 persons for the same number of games at this point in the 1974 season.

There could be a reversal in this upward trend if pennant races do not develop the remainder of the season. Cincinnati and Oakland are threatening runaways in their respective divisions, and Pittsburgh and Boston have comfortable leads in the two remaining divisions.

Not surprisingly, those are four of the teams showing attendance increases. And to prove that winning your division is not the only way to bring out the customers, New York Yankees and Milwaukee Brewers show the most dramatic attendance increases.

Chicago White Sox, Atlanta Braves and New York Mets, all doing worse than expected, have suffered the most, with each club showing a decline of more than 150,000 fans midway through the season.

The Yankees, meanwhile, have drawn 739,320 fans to Shea Stadium to see their revamped lineup which includes Jim "Catfish" Hunter and Bobby Bonds. That is 252,000 fans more than the Yankees had drawn at this time last year, an increase of nearly 52 per cent.

Milwaukee, with Henry Aaron in its lineup, has drawn 771,661 fans, an increase of 270,658 persons and a jump of 49 per cent over 1974.

Most of the increase is in the American League East, where only Detroit Tigers show a decline. Over-all, that division's attendance is up 20 per cent over 1974. The AL West, where Chicago and Kansas City show sharp declines, is virtually even with last year.

The National League East, where the Mets and Montreal are suffering significant declines, is down 1.4 per cent from 1974 even though Pittsburgh and Philadelphia show strong increases. The NL West, with the highest attendance of any division, is up 3.1 per cent.

Los Angeles Dodgers lead the majors, drawing 1.5 million. Cincinnati, with 1.23 million, and Philadelphia, with just over a million, are the other clubs with draws in seven figures.

San Francisco Giants' home attendance of 285,753 is the lowest in either league, a position the club held in 1974 as well. Meanwhile, the Giants' neighbors, Oakland A's, have drawn 614,024, an increase of 172,162 and 39 per cent.

The National League's attendance is up only .8 of a per cent this season, while the American League is up 10.3 per cent. But the NL has drawn 55 per cent of the fans —9,310,813 to 7,506,897 for the AL.

Gilbert Signed

NEW YORK (AP) — Right winger Rod Gilbert, leading scorer with New York Rangers last season, has signed a multi-year contract with the National Hockey League club, general manager Emile Francis announced Wednesday.

The 34-year-old Gilbert became a free agent in April when he finished the third year of a three-year contract. He did not have to play his option year because of a "consent decree" signed nearly two years ago between the NHL and the rival World Hockey Association.

Terms of his new contract were not disclosed. However, it was believed Gilbert was seeking a four-year contract with a raise from his estimated $175,000 annual salary.

Aussie Side Sharp

HOVE, England (Reuter) — Tony Greig, the new skipper for England, was given a reminder of the tough job ahead of him as the Australian cricketers piled up a huge first-innings score of 402 for seven declared against Sussex on the first day of their three-day match Wednesday.

Greig began the day well, taking a wicket in his first over, but then he watched Greg Chappell and Rick McCosker slam centuries against a Sussex attack that missed the penetration of England pace man John Snow, who was rested for this match.

Chappell brought Greig's misery to an end with the declaration, and by close Sussex had made 13 without loss.

Lloyd Paces Wings

Terry Lloyd fired six goals Wednesday night to spark Philadelphia Wings to a 22-10 win over Maryland Arrows in National Lacrosse League play.

Sandy Lynch, Larry Lloyd and Jim Wasson had two goals apiece for the Wings, who took over sole possession of third place with the win.

Pele's Draw Fading?

Brian Godfrey's goal with 21 minutes left to play gave the visiting Portland Timbers a 2-1 North American Soccer League win over New York Cosmos Wednesday night before a disappointing crowd of 13,421.

Pele scored the lone New York goal when he headed in a rebound of a 25-yard drive by Luis De La Fuente with 15:46 gone in the second half.

The Brazilian superstar had two other good scoring opportunities but missed when his 35-yard kick hit the crossbar and bounced over the goal and again when he outleaped three defenders only to have his head shot go over the goal.

In other action, Ivan Lukacevic and Peter Roe scored two goals apiece to lead Toronto Metros-Croatia to a 5-0 victory over the Bicentennials in Hartford.

FLAVELL NEXT TO GO?

TORONTO (CP) — Veteran goaltender Doug Favell appears likely to be the next victim of the youth movement instituted by president Harold Ballard of Toronto Maple Leafs.

Ballard said this week he is trying to trade the goalkeeper to another National Hockey League team.

The Leafs will rely on Gord McRae and Pierre Hamel, both rookies last year, and Wayne Thomas, who was third-stringer last year with Montreal Canadiens.

Ballard said he hadn't received a serious offer for Favell from any other NHL team but that Detroit Red Wings have expressed an interest in the goaltender.

"Doug didn't play very well for us last season but he's a good goalie. I look at how a man practices and relate it to how he plays in games. Doug wasn't going all out in practices and it wasn't good for team morale."

Favell has completed two years of a five-year contract with Toronto. The Leafs obtained him from Philadelphia Flyers in 1973 in return for all-star goalie Bernie Parent.

Favell would be the fifth Toronto veteran to go since the end of last season. The Leafs allowed Eddie Shack, Norm Ullman and captain Dave Keon to become free agents on June 1 and sold Bill Flett to Atlanta Flames.

Cyclist Injured

MORZINE - AVORIAZ, France (AP) — Belgian cycling star Eddy Merckx suffered a jaw fracture in a fall in Tuesday's stage of the Tour de France but said he would continue in the race. Merckx, five-time winner of the event and currently second to France's Bernard Thevenet, said: "My problem now is eating." The tour has five days to go.
